CITY, COUNTY FLOODED BY HEAVY RAIN

3 Ohio U. Students Suspended; Rally Scheduled Today

ATHENS, Ohio (AP)—Three Ohio University students were suspended today for disciplinary reasons as a result of a campus disturbance Sunday night.

The office of University Vice President James Whalen disclosed the action but declined to identify the students.

A brief statement from Whalen's office stated there "probably will be additional cases in the near future" as the investigation continues.

Upwards of 1,500 student spectators and participants in a demonstration roamed the campus several hours Sunday night. Windows were broken in several campus buildings, including the home of University President Vernon Alden.

A group of students announced plans for a campus rally scheduled at noon today. That was the deadline students set for university authorities to start acting on a list of grievances.

It appeared unlikely the deadline would be met.

"I would be very foolish to say that we should act on these grievances or even the high priority ones by noon tomorrow,"

OSU President Vernon Alden said Thursday night.

Alden made the announcement in an address directed to the students which was carried by local radio stations.

Alden said the university had agreed to consider the grievances but that it would be impossible to make immediate changes.

He met with a five-member grievance committee, headed by acting student body president Rita Coriell, and afterward announced that "all the suggestions will be evaluated and reviewed with students and faculty members and when appropriate, there will be action."

At the time the noon rally was called, student leaders did not disclose what action might be taken if the university failed to meet the demands.

But in his radio talk, Alden warned that "any disruption in the educational process and or violence will be met with appropriate action."

The grievances were drawn up at a meeting of about 3,000 students in the aftermath of a Sunday night campus disturbance. About 1,500 students took part in a rock throwing incident.

The Ohio National Guard put 650 men on standby alert in Athens, but the troops pulled out Wednesday when campus operations returned to normal.

Alden also warned that his decision to weigh the grievances "does not mean I have given in to some of the threats that are being made. I am simply trying to recognize that many of your grievances are real . . ."

OSU Fire Report Set Saturday

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The chief of campus police at Ohio State University says investigators hope to determine by Saturday whether Wednesday's OSU dormitory fire was a case of arson.

The fire, on the 11th floor of the 24-story Lincoln Tower dorm killed one coed and injured 15 others.

Police Chief O. R. Starr said tests of burned materials in the dormitory are being made by the Ohio Bureau of Criminal Identification and local authorities.

Petitions signed by about 1,350 residents of Lincoln and its twin high-rise dorm, Morrill, were given to OSU Vice President Gordon Carson Thursday. The petitions asked for added fire precautions, including full-time guards.

Funds Received For School Study

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The State Education Department received controlling board approval Thursday to enter into a $109,538 contract for a study of "critical needs."

"These critical needs will serve as the basis upon which innovative proposals are to be developed by local school districts," explained Martin W. Essex, state superintendent of public schools.

On the Democratic side, for instance, is President Johnson, an avowed noncandidate. Backers of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, who became a contender for the nomination too late to file for the Oregon race, are spending heavily to spread the word that votes for Johnson will be interpreted by political observers as support for Humphrey.

Kennedy is taking the threat seriously. As he stumps the state he fires salvo after salvo at Humphrey, while his attacks on McCarthy have all but ceased.

On the Republican side, it will be the second time Nixon and California Gov. Ronald Reagan have been on the same ballot. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York hovers in the background as a write-in hopeful.

Nixon is regarded as almost certain to draw the most votes but he wants to keep either of his opponents from making too good a showing, even in a losing cause. Still fresh in the former vice president's mind is the way Reagan drew 22 per cent of the vote in the Nebraska primary, all on write-ins.

Rockefeller lashed out at Kennedy today, criticizing him for sliding back and forth from liberal to conservative positions.

"The junior senator from New York, campaigning hard for the Democratic nomination, seems able to change his rhetoric as fast as he wants to change his residence," Rockefeller said.

He made the charge in a speech prepared for delivery at Atlanta's Emory University while on a two-day swing through the South.

The Southern trip kept Rockefeller far from Oregon but he was represented there by Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York City. Repaying past favors, Lindsay planned appearances today in Portland, Eugene and Corvallis to boost the governor's write-in campaign.

McCarthy rubbed shoulders with Hollywood's beautiful people Thursday, attending a fund-raising party at the home of actor Paul Newman, one of his supporters.

In appearances earlier in the day at three California campuses, he restated his determination not to yield to either the Kennedy or Humphrey forces.

"I intend to go all the way," he said. "I don't have it in mind to surrender. I haven't made any deals."

Roads Closed, Train Derailed After Rains

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Weather Bureau at Cincinnati said the Ohio River was rising about one foot per hour and should reach flood stage—52 feet—by Saturday morning.

The Little Miami and the Great Miami rivers, Ohio River tributaries which wind their way through much of southwest portions of the state, were expected to reach flood stage about noon today, the bureau said.

Large evacuations also were reported in Morrow and South Lebanon in Warren County, Loveland in Clermont County and Somerville in Butler County.

Just about every county in the southern half of the state had secondary roads closed by flooding streams, and many communities, even Columbus, was plagued by overflowing storm sewers unable to take the mass of water from constricted rivers.

Dozens of communities closed their schools for the day since school buses were unable to navigate the flooding secondary roads.

The train derailment came when a 77-car Baltimore & Ohio freight train, bound from Newark to Cincinnati, hit a washed-out culvert, two miles north of Bloomingburg in Fayette County, about seven miles north of Washington Court House.

Seventeen of the cars derailed, some piled three high, but no one was injured. The first 21 of the cars in the train, including the 17 derailed, were damaged, according to the conductor, J. T. Trimble of Newark. L. E. Schwartz of Newark was the engineer. Most of the cars were empty.

All Washington Court House and Fayette County schools also were closed by flooded secondary roads, and storm sewer flooding. All schools in Ross County outside Chillicothe also were closed.

A few landslides blocked some roads in Ross County, where five families had to be evacuated from the Vigo section, just outside Chillicothe, and several families from Austin, 10 miles north of the city.

It was Paint Creek and several other streams which flow into the Scioto in Ross County that was causing most of the trouble in Chillicothe. There Civil Defense officials called on high school seniors to help sandbag the Adena levee on the creek in the western part of the city. Ohio 104, 139 and 180 in the area were closed as well as U.S. 35 to the east.

At least 60 families were evacuated at Logan in Hocking County and in the area of the northeast section of the city, affected by flooding of Old Town Creek. Police Chief Roy Kelch at Logan said people were being evacuated at Rock Bridge and that an evacuation headquarters was set up in Logan's West Elementary School.

Logan police and auxiliaries in the county's Civil Defense unit were using two amphibious "ducks" to help in the evacuation work, and the Logan unit of the National Guard was on duty.

In Athens County at least 10 state roads were closed and in Athens six streets were flooded, blocking traffic. The West Green of Ohio University, usually flooded when the Hocking River overflows, had prepared Thursday night in moving some equipment out of basements.

Clean-Up Started; Millions in Damage

Clean-up operations were under way early today throughout the city and county following flood conditions during the night that caused damage expected to run into millions of dollars.

Several rain gauges recorded as much as 5.75 inches of rainfall since yesterday morning. However, the official records kept at the Water Works Dept. listed 2.8 inches.

About 85 families were routed from their homes on Watt St. and in the Bloomdale Addition beginning 3 a.m. by city and county officials. Residents of Rosewood Ave. bordering Ted Lewis Park were also evacuated as were those living on Lewis Ave. east of N. Court St.

City police, deputies, service department workers, utility company crews and volunteers began emergency operations about 2:30 a.m.

FLOOD damage was estimated early today at a "conservative million dollars." However, the loss of several costly bridges, damage to roads, homes, livestock and croplands will push the figure into the "millions of dollars."

Six roads in Pickaway County are closed as a result of the deluge last night. A total of six bridges in the county were washed out by the flood waters.

County Road 11 (Haysville-Adelphi) is closed due to damage done to the road itself. The other roads in the county closed because of bridge damage are: Road 59, Pickaway-Salt Creek; Road 44, Zane Trail; Road 102, Frankfort-Westfall; Road 189, Randall; Road 205, South Perry-Salt Creek Twp.; Road 45, Jefferson-Westfall-Emmitt.

South Central Power Co. reported today that lightning Thursday night caused the loss of electric power south of Clarksburg and caused a fuse to burn out of a power line north of Chillicothe.

The utility company also reported that they experienced some power transmission problems early today, but stated there should be no further trouble.

General Telephone Co. reported some cable damage, but nothing of major importance. Crews are still checking the phone lines. Keith Wagner, local General manager, asked phone subscribers to use their phones on an emergency basis only early today.

AREAS in the county hardest hit by the floods were the Scioto Creek and Salt Creek valleys.

Local Man Saves Two Fishermen From Flood Water

Rink Fowler, 40, Route 2, braved the raging waters of the Scioto River Wednesday night to rescue two young men marooned on an island just south of the old state dam.

The two fishermen were identified as Gary Gilpin, 21, New Holland and John Oliver, 17, Circleville. They had waded out to the island at about 1 p.m. yesterday to dig bait.

At about two, they noticed the water had risen to a level too deep to wade. They began yelling for help.

It was nearly 10 p.m. before area residents realized the men were in trouble. Fowler said they could hear the voices at his house, nearly a mile and a half away, but didn't think anything about it.

DALE Rogers first reported the men yelling for help. Fowler was making a telephone call when Rogers came on the party line, reporting the emergency and asking for the line so he could notify the sheriff's department.

Fowler immediately set out in search of the marooned men. He crossed the old Pennsylvania Railroad Bridge on foot from the Canal Road, and located the men on the island just south of it.

He then came back to guide Pickaway County Sheriff's Deputies to the scene. The officers had a rope and life jackets with them.

Not waiting for a boat to arrive, Fowler took the rope and two life jackets, swam the river to the island and secured the rope to a tree.

He helped the two men into their life jackets and followed them to shore. They used the rope for a safety line. The island is under water today.

"I know that river like the back of my hand," Fowler said today when telling of the incident. "The current really wasn't too bad if it hadn't been for all the stuff I was taking out there."

THE father of four children, Fowler has lived, fished and hunted along the river all of his life.

"I could swim before I could walk," he says. Rink, his wife Carol, and sons William, Steve, Jace and Jeff live on the Canal Road. They plan to move to Florida sometime this summer. He has secured work there as a plumber.

Laurelville Is Disaster Area

The downtown square of Laurelville at noon today was a disaster area with the main section of the town under five feet of water.

Officials of the village stated that there was an urgent need of foodstuffs and drinking water.

A temporary shelter was set up by the Red Cross at noon today in the Laurelville High School. Workers stated that much help was needed in the village.

Two bridges near the village were washed out during the downpour. The bridge on Route 180 north of Laurelville and the bridge over Sam's Creek were inundated and destroyed.

The Pickaway County Sheriff's Department was on the go all night long. Deputies James Lockard, Bill Dountz and Warren Straley and Sheriff Radcliff assisted in several rescues during the night.

They reported most of the havoc caused by the flood was to the east of Route 23.

After wrapping up rescue operations in Pickaway County, the Sheriff's Staff went to Laurelville to help in that small Hocking County Community, hard hit by flooding of Salt Creek and Laurel Run.

The Scioto River here measured 14.3 feet at 8 a.m. today and is expected to crest late tonight at about 16 feet.

Phil Grubb, a resident of Rosewood Ave. near Ted Lewis Park, compared the flood waters today with those of January 1959. Grubb said the water level this morning was a couple of inches higher than that of 1959.

Rumors in the city that the auxiliary spillway at A.W. Marion was opened last night and this morning are false, according to officials at the park. Officials also stated that there was no chance of the dam breaking, which was another rumor that accompanied the torrential rains.

In Circleville, the only north-south connecting link at the peak of the flood was Nicholas Drive. Both Court St. and Pickaway St. were impassable, covered with five to six feet of water.

Water reached as far north as Pleasant St., although families there did not have to leave their homes.

Ted Lewis Park was completely flooded. Families along Rosewood Ave. had to be evacuated, and were taken to Atwater School for temporary housing. Lewis Ave. and the Court St. area to Pleasant St. was vacated.

The Bloomdale Addition just off Watt St. was flooded. Families there were taken to High Street School. The Red Cross set up a temporary refuge station at the schools providing hot coffee and doughnuts early today.

The Red Cross set up an emergency kitchen at the office 157 Watt St. to feed the flood victims at noon today.

Water filled practically every basement in Circleville. Storm sewers and sanitary sewers backed up, adding to the miseries caused by the flood.

Patients in the Kearns Nursing Home on North Court St. had to be evacuated to the upper floors of the building.

Judge William Ammer, who lives on Pleasant St., said today the water got that high July 14, 1947 when torrential rains pushed Hargus out of its banks. The only other time water reached Pleasant Street was in 1913.

3 Ohio U. Students Suspended; Rally Scheduled Today

ATHENS, Ohio (AP)—Three Ohio University students were suspended today for disciplinary reasons as a result of a campus disturbance Sunday night.

The office of University Vice President James Whalen disclosed the action but declined to identify the students.

A brief statement from Whalen's office stated there "probably will be additional cases in the near future" as the investigation continues.

Upwards of 1,500 student spectators and participants in a demonstration roamed the campus several hours Sunday night. Windows were broken in several campus buildings, including the home of University President Vernon Alden.

A group of students announced plans for a campus rally scheduled at noon today. That was the deadline students set for university authorities to start acting on a list of grievances.

It appeared unlikely the deadline would be met.

"I would be very foolish to say that we should act on these grievances or even the high priority ones by noon tomorrow,"

Copter Crash Cause Sought

PARAMOUNT, Calif. (AP)—Federal officials pressed a search today in a pasture, in the Los Angeles County morgue and elsewhere for the cause of the worst helicopter crash in U.S. history.

All 23 persons aboard the single-rotor commuter Sikorsky S61 helicopter returning to Los Angeles International Airport from Disneyland were killed in the crash Wednesday evening. They included nine Ohioans on vacation and two prominent Californians.

Los Angeles Airways resumed its charter operations in the metropolitan area after a post-crash suspension of flights.

The bodies of the 20 passengers and three crewmen were found in or near the charred wreckage in a pasture near a busy intersection of Paramount, halfway on the 32-mile hop from Disneyland to the airport.

The dead included Mayor John R. Trainor, 46, of Red Bluff, Calif.; Dr. Arden K. Rudelli, 43, professor of education at the University of California at Berkeley; and Morris Kromfeld, a New York investment banker from West Englewood, N.J.

Eight relatives of Mrs. Jack Garner of Columbus, Ohio, also were aboard. They were nearing the end of a vacation.

A rotor blade broke away from the big craft before it fell. The possibility that this caused the crash was being studied.

Funds Received For School Study

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The State Education Department received controlling board approval Thursday to enter into a $109,538 contract for a study of "critical needs."

"These critical needs will serve as the basis upon which innovative proposals are to be developed by local school districts," explained Martin W. Essex, state superintendent of public schools.

SAVES TWO — Rink Fowler, Route 2, points out onto the Scioto River where the island on which two fishermen were stranded is now completely covered with water. Fowler swam the river last night to help with rescue operations of the two men.

Local Man Saves Two Fishermen From Flood Water

Rink Fowler, 40, Route 2, braved the raging waters of the Scioto River Wednesday night to rescue two young men marooned on an island just south of the old state dam.

The two fishermen were identified as Gary Gilpen, 21, New Holland and John Oliver, 17, Circleville. They had waded out to the island at about 1 p.m. yesterday to dig bait.

At about two, they noticed the water had risen to a level too deep to wade. They began yelling for help.

It was nearly 10 p.m. before area residents realized the men were in trouble. Fowler said they could hear the voices at his house, nearly a mile and a half away, but didn't think anything about it.

DALE Rogers first reported the men yelling for help. Fowler was making a telephone call when Rogers came on the party line, reporting the emergency and asking for the line so he could notify the sheriff's department.

Fowler immediately set out in search of the marooned men. He crossed the old Pennsylvania Railroad Bridge on foot from the Canal Road, and located the men on the island just south of it.

He then came back to guide Pickaway County Sheriff's Deputies to the scene. The officers had a rope and life jackets with them.

Not waiting for a boat to arrive, Fowler took the rope and two life jackets, swam the river to the island and secured the rope to a tree.

He helped the two men into their life jackets and followed them to shore. They used the rope for a safety line. The island is under water today.

"I know that river like the back of my hand," Fowler said today when telling of the incident. "The current really wasn't too bad if it hadn't been for all the stuff I was taking out there."

THE father of four children, Fowler has lived, fished and hunted along the river all of his life.

"I could swim before I could walk," he says. Rink, his wife Carol, and sons William, Steve, Jace and Jeff live on the Canal Road. They plan to move to Florida sometime this summer. He has secured work there as a plumber.

Goldwater Libel Jury Deliberates

NEW YORK (AP)—A federal jury of nine men and three women received today the $2 million libel action by Barry Goldwater against a now defunct magazine that said he was psychologically unfit to be president.

After a 45-minute charge by Federal Judge Harold R. Tyler Jr., the jury retired to consider its decision. Tyler said a unanimous verdict would be required.

Restrict Bridge In Henry County

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The state Highway Department today said a Henry County bridge over the Maumee River on Ohio 109 will undergo traffic restrictions at once because of deteriorating beams and joints discovered in an inspection.

The department said vertical clearance will now be limited to seven feet from 13 feet, and "hat load limits will be reduced 80 per cent, eliminating all but the lightest of trucks."

Clean-Up Started; Millions in Damage

Clean-up operations were under way early today throughout the city and county following flood conditions during the night that caused damage expected to run into millions of dollars.

Several rain gauges recorded as much as 5.75 inches of rainfall since yesterday morning. However, the official records kept at the Water Works Dept. listed 2.8 inches.

About 85 families were routed from their homes on Watt St. and in the Bloomdale Addition beginning 3 a.m. by city and county officials. Residents of Rosewood Ave. bordering Ted Lewis Park were also evacuated as were those living on Lewis Ave. east of N. Court St.

City police, deputies, service department workers, utility company crews and volunteers began emergency operations about 2:30 a.m.

FLOOD damage was estimated early today at a "conservative million dollars." However, the loss of several costly bridges, damage to roads, homes, livestock and croplands will push the figure into the "millions of dollars."

Six roads in Pickaway County are closed as a result of the deluge last night. A total of six bridges in the county were washed out by the flood waters. County Road 11 (Haysville-Adelphi) is closed due to damage done to the road itself. The other roads in the county closed because of bridge damage are: Road 59, Pickaway-Salt Creek; Road 44, Zane Trail; Road 102, Frankfort-Westfall; Road 189, Randall; Road 205, South Perry-Salt Creek Twp.; Road 45, Jefferson-Westfall-Emmitt.

South Central Power Co. reported today that lightning Thursday night caused the loss of electric power south of Clarksburg and caused a fuse to burn out of a power line north of Chillicothe.

The utility company also reported that they experienced some power transmission problems early today, but stated there should be no further trouble.

General Telephone Co. reported some cable damage, but nothing of major importance. Crews are still checking the phone lines. Keith Wagner, local General manager, asked phone subscribers to use their phones on an emergency basis only early today.

AREAS in the county hardest hit by the floods were the Scioto Creek and Salt Creek valleys.

Two families were stranded in their homes on the Kingston Pike near the banks of Scioto

Laurelville Is Disaster Area

The downtown square of Laurelville at noon today was a disaster area with the main section of the town under five feet of water.

Officials of the village stated that there was an urgent need of foodstuffs and drinking water.

A temporary shelter was set up by the Red Cross at noon today in the Laurelville High School. Workers stated that much help was needed in the village.

Two bridges near the village were washed out during the downpour. The bridge on Route 180 north of Laurelville and the bridge over Sam's Creek were inundated and destroyed.

Rainfall Tally Listed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The heavy rainfall in Ohio, particularly in the southern half of the state, brought on the flooding situation plaguing many communities Friday.

The heaviest rainfall reported by the Weather Bureau for the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m., although rains had not stopped, was in Washington Court House where 4.73 inches were recorded.

A number of other communities were above the three-inch mark.

Readings given by the Bureau Friday morning included Chillicothe 3.30 inches, Sedalia 3.31, London 3.43, Bourneville 3.50, Hillsboro 2.09, Piquette 2.95, Dayton 2.12, Parkersburg, W. Va., 3.63, Columbus 2.51, Marysville and Delaware 1.22, Galion, .54 of an inch, Kenton .63, Larue .65, Mount Gilead .70, Marion .61, Zanesville 2.38, Akron-Canton area .55, Cleveland .03, Findlay .65, Mansfield .66, Toledo .02 and Youngstown .09.

In Circleville, the only north-

Flood Sidelights

The official rainfall of 2.8 inches recorded here is questionable. Pete Neff, W. High St., keeps a day-by-day measure of local rainfall and his figures for the most part coincide with the official—but this morning his gauge listed 4.10 inches since yesterday afternoon. Other reports list as much as 5.75 inches in the 24-hour period from 8 a.m. Thursday to 8 a.m. today.

The Pickaway County Sheriff's Department was on the go all night long. Deputies James Lockard, Bill Dountz and Warren Straley and Sheriff Radcliff assisted in several rescues during the night.

They reported most of the havoc caused by the flood was to the east of Route 23.

After wrapping up rescue operations in Pickaway County, the Sheriff's Staff went to Laurelville to help in that small Hocking County Community, hard hit by flooding of Salt Creek and Laurel Run.

The Scioto River here measured 14.3 feet at 8 a.m. today and is expected to crest late tonight at about 16 feet.

Phil Grubb, a resident of Rosewood Ave. near Ted Lewis Park, compared the flood waters today with those of January 1959. Grubb said the water level this morning was a couple of inches higher than that of 1959.

Rumors in the city that the auxiliary spillway at A.W. Marion was opened last night and this morning are false, according to officials at the park. Officials also stated that there was no chance of the dam breaking, which was another rumor that accompanied the torrential rains.

In Circleville, the only north-south connecting link at the peak of the flood was Nicholas Drive. Both Court St. and Pickaway St. were impassable, covered with five to six feet of water.

Water reached as far north as Pleasant St., although families there did not have to leave their homes.

Ted Lewis Park was completely flooded. Families along Rosewood Ave. had to be evacuated, and were taken to Atwater School for temporary housing. Lewis Ave. and the Court St. area to Pleasant St. was vacated.

The Bloomdale Addition just off Watt St. was flooded. Families there were taken to High Street School. The Red Cross set up a temporary refugee station at the schools providing hot coffee and doughnuts early today.

The Red Cross set up an emergency kitchen at the office 157 Watt St. to feed the flood victims at noon today.

Water filled practically every basement in Circleville. Storm sewers and sanitary sewers backed up, adding to the miseries caused by the flood.

Patients in the Kearns Nursing Home on North Court St. had to be evacuated to the upper floors of the building.

Judge William Ammer, who lives on Pleasant St., said today the water got that high July 14, 1947 when torrential rains pushed Hargus out of its banks. The only other time water reached Pleasant Street was in 1913.

Oregon Alive with Candidates, Outriders

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sticking to his easy-does-it strategy, Richard M. Nixon moves into Oregon today to do some unhurried campaigning for next Tuesday's Republican presidential primary.

The state is already alive with candidates and their outriders, both Democratic and Republican.

Tuesday's Democratic primary will be the third test between Sens. Eugene J. McCarthy and Robert F. Kennedy, but as usual there will be quirks in the makeup of the ballot.

One of the candidates listed on the Democratic side, for instance, is President Johnson, an avowed noncandidate. Backers of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, who became a contender for the nomination too late to file for the Oregon race, are spending heavily to spread the word that votes for Johnson will be interpreted by political observers as support for Humphrey.

Kennedy is taking the threat seriously. As he stumps the state he fires salvo after salvo at Humphrey, while his attacks on McCarthy have all but ceased.

On the Republican side, it will be the second time Nixon and California Gov. Ronald Reagan have been on the same ballot. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York hovers in the background as a write-in hopeful.

Nixon is regarded as almost certain to draw the most votes but he wants to keep either of his opponents from making too good a showing, even in a losing cause. Still fresh in the former vice president's mind is the way Reagan drew 22 per cent of the vote in the Nebraska primary, all on write-ins.

Rockefeller lashed out at Kennedy today, criticizing him for sliding back and forth from liberal to conservative positions.

"The junior senator from New York, campaigning hard for the Democratic nomination, seems able to change his rhetoric as fast as he wants to change his residence," Rockefeller said.

He made the charge in a speech prepared for delivery at Atlanta's Emory University while on a two-day swing through the South.

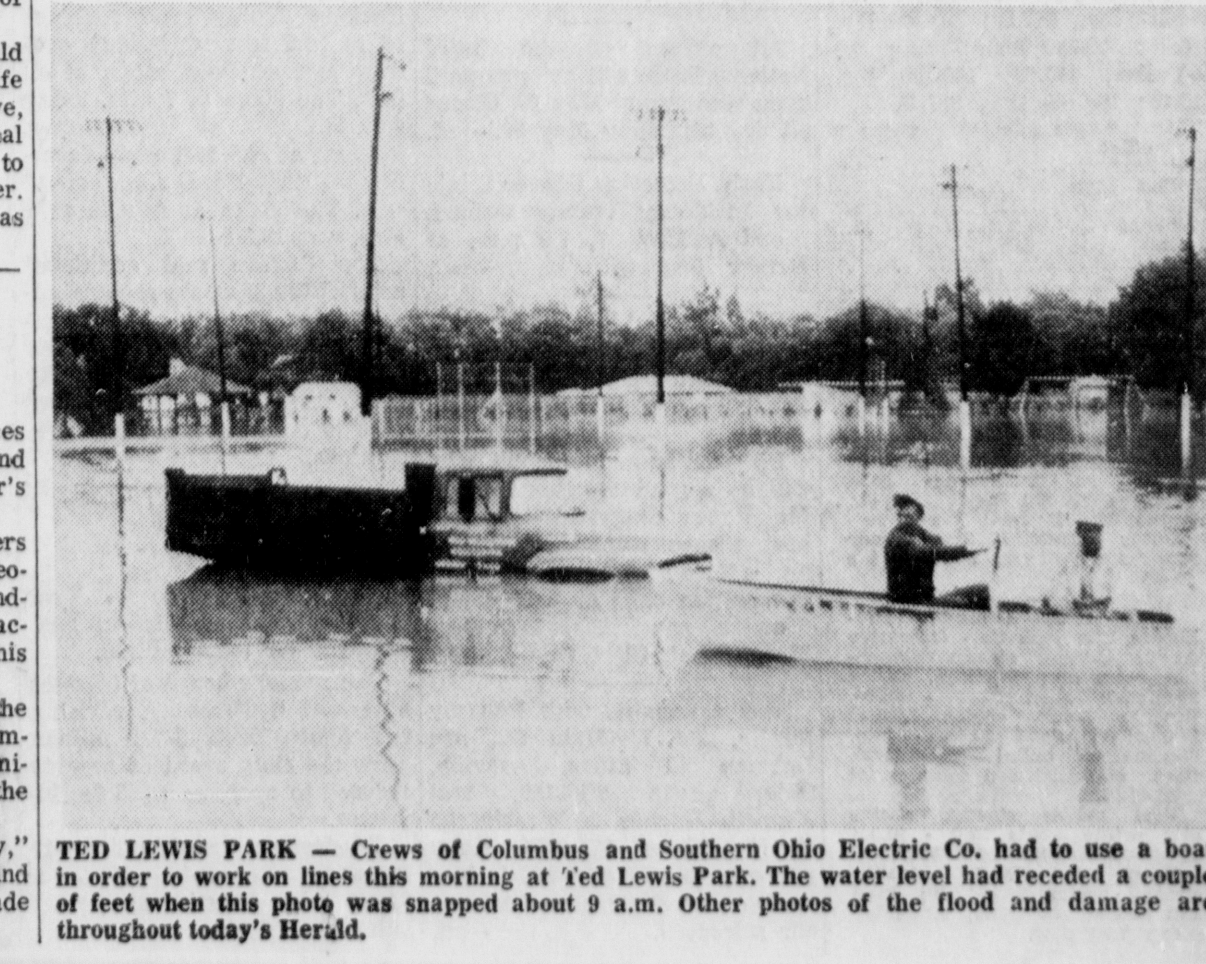

The Southern trip kept Rockefeller far from Oregon but he was represented there by Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York City. Repaying past favors, Lindsay planned appearances today in Portland, Eugene and Corvallis to boost the governor's write-in campaign.

McCarthy rubbed shoulders with Hollywood's beautiful people Thursday, attending a fund-raising party at the home of actor Paul Newman, one of his supporters.

In appearances earlier in the day at three California campuses, he restated his determination not to yield to either the Kennedy or Humphrey forces.

"I intend to go all the way," he said. "I don't have it in mind to surrender. I haven't made any deals."

TED LEWIS PARK — Crews of Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. had to use a boat in order to work on lines this morning at Ted Lewis Park. The water level had receded a couple of feet when this photo was snapped about 9 a.m. Other photos of the flood and damage are throughout today's Herald.

Earl Radcliff and Mayor Richard Gearhardt were called out to help direct rescue operations in town. They were assisted by the Sheriff's Department and the Highway Patrol.

The Fairgrounds was one of the first places hit by high waters. Horses in the barns there were moved to higher ground. None were believed lost in the flood.

Persons treated for flood-caused injuries at Berger Hospital included: Paul Wellington, 50, of 708 Clinton St., was bitten on both hands by a dog while helping to evacuate a family on Watt St. Raymond Leach, 27, of 234 Pearl St., dropped a piece of concrete on his foot while repairing the damaged road on N. Roads Closed,

At Circleville where about 80 families were evacuated, Red Cross workers were on duty feeding and housing residents who had to leave their homes. Most of the flooding there was from Hargus and Hominy creeks and Sgt. Roderick List of the Circleville Police Department said "if it weren't for the dam, we'd be floating down the river."

The Weather Bureau said flooding Hocking River in Athens and Hocking Counties was at 17.2 feet at 6 a.m. and rising against a flood stage of 17 feet. This usually means flooding of lowland areas such as the Ohio University's West Green but not the city itself.

At Enterprise in Hocking County the Hocking River at 7 a.m. had a 14.1 stage and rising against a flood stage of 12 feet. Many residents of low-lying areas along the river had to leave their homes in such periods, but most farmland is flooded.

The Weather Bureau, however, said "anyone along the Hocking River subject to flooding should take all necessary precautions as moderate to major flooding will occur today."

An Emergency aid station was set up in the National Guard Armory at Athens and officials said about 150 persons would be housed there.

Most schools in Athens and surrounding Athens County were closed.

At least three roads blocked by water in Athens County also were blocked by landslides from hills adjacent to roadways.

The city of Chillicothe was virtually isolated by flood water. The only highway out of the town was U.S. 23 to the south.

Several families were evacuated from the Adena Lake area at the west edge of Chillicothe. The town received more than three inches of rain Thursday and since May 8 has received some rain every day except May 16.

The Scioto, which flows through southern Ohio counties to the Ohio River, was reaching the medium flooding stage at many points where the banks are low. Most of the low-lying areas along this stream's tributaries were already flooding.

The Ohio Highway Patrol reported some families in Fayette County and in the small Clinton County town of Sabina also had to be evacuated, as were some families in Chillicothe and at Rutland in Meigs County west of Pomeroy where Leeding Creek overflowed its banks. At Rutland some of the families being evacuated were affected by a creek covering Ohio 124 by several feet.

Some livestock in the Circleville area was endangered by floodwaters, the Pickaway County sheriff's office said. Several horses stabled at the county fairgrounds in Circleville had to be evacuated.

The weather bureau at Columbus said it measured nearly 2.5 inches of rain through Thursday and early today and that similar totals were recorded elsewhere in the state.

Circleville Police Chief Robert Temple said most of those evacuated from their homes were taken to the High Street and Atwater elementary schools to spend the rest of the night.

No boats were used in the evacuation, police said, but some were called for in case they were needed. A Civil Defense unit from Columbus arrived with boats and other equipment early today, and Red Cross workers also were on hand.

About 200 police, sheriff deputies, firemen and volunteers aided in the evacuation of the homes.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The U.S. Weather Bureau said here today that major flooding is expected on the Hocking River in Logan and Athens counties as rainfall amounts up to four inches occurred in the river basin during the past 24 hours.

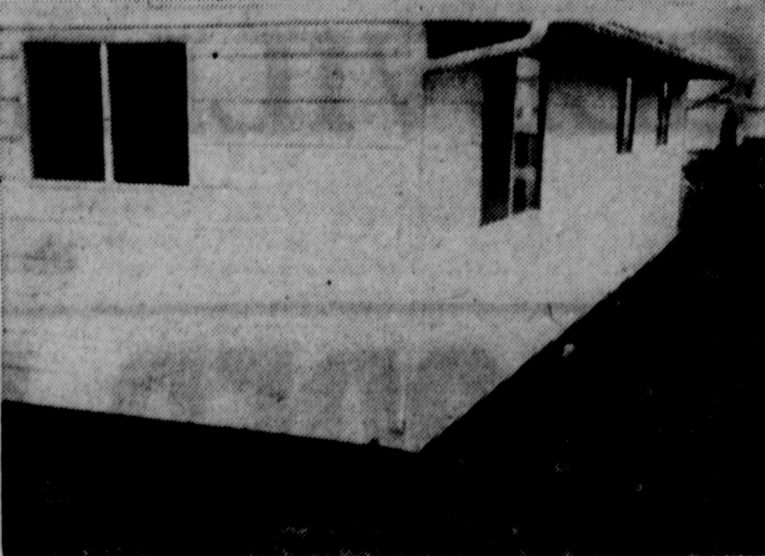

The Bureau said these crests are expected: At Enterprise in Hocking County crest forecast 16 to 16.5 feet by Friday evening against flood stage of 12 feet. The stage at Athens at 7 a.m. was 14.1 feet. At Athens, crest forecast at 22.5 feet early Saturday against flood stage of 17 feet. The stage at Athens at 7 a.m. was 17.2 feet.

The Bureau said additional rainfall today would require adjustments to these stage forecasts. It advised all residents along the river who usually leave their homes at flooding time to take the necessary precautions.

Kent State Sets '68-'69 Budget
KENT, Ohio (AP)—Kent State University's 1968-'69 budget will be $46.8 million.

The school's board of trustees approved it Thursday, revising the figure from $47.2 million after the Ohio board of regents refused to approve a $45 fee increase.

Trustees granted university President Robert I. White a $4,000 raise, boosting his yearly salary to $38,000.

and many others were forced to leave their homes.

Further down stream at Gold Cliff Park another family was rescued, while at the Cromley Egg factory on County Road 511, three families had to be evacuated.

Tom Eisea of Eisea Inc. provided a powerful outboard motorboat to take the families to safety. Pickaway County Sheriff Dwight Radcliff directed rescue operations.

Schools which had to be closed in the county because of inundated roads were all schools in the Logan Elm district; Monroe, Williamsport and Jackson in the Westfall District.

Route 56 at Laurelsville was inundated and house trailers parked on lots between Route 180 and Salt Creek were swept downstream by the force of the current.

IT WAS impossible to reach Laurelsville during the peak of the flood.

Deputy Sheriff Warren Straley was on the road when the rain storms peaked. "It rained like it was pouring out of a bucket," Straley said.

He reported the hardest rains came about midnight. The floodwaters north of Circleville crested at about 3 a.m., and a little later in Circleville.

Along Scioto Creek south and east of town, the waters peaked at about 4:30 a.m.

Fences were literally flattened by the rushing waters. Fields were badly eroded, private lanes and bridges washed out.

Scioto River Flood Crest Estimated

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—A rise of from 5 to 11 feet above flood stage at several points along the Scioto River was predicted by the Weather Bureau Friday.

The river began overflowing its banks at Circleville Friday morning and will crest at 16 feet Saturday afternoon. Flood stage at Circleville is 14 feet.

A flood of this magnitude at Circleville affects transportation and farm areas but has little or no effect on residential areas.

The Scioto is expected to crest at Chillicothe at 18.5 feet early Sunday against a flood stage of 16 feet. The greater problem at Chillicothe is flooding along Paint Creek just before it enters the Scioto River on the south side of the city.

Numerous small streams in the area are already out of their banks. These streams not only affect transportation on all secondary roads but floor some residential areas.

Piketon in Pike County will see the Scioto rise to a crest of 26.5 feet Saturday afternoon against a flood stage there of 16 feet. This will affect most secondary roads in the area and farmlands and a very limited segment of the population.

Watershed Districts Are Needed

"Now is the time to start planning on watershed development," Don Archer, Pickaway District soil conservationist said today after viewing the damage caused by the flood.

"Two proposed flood control structures on Hominy Creek would have prevented the flooding in Circleville."

"Residents and landowners along Salt Creek were asked if they wanted to form a small watershed conservancy district, and they felt it was not needed," Archer reported.

"Flood control structures along the stream could have prevented much of the damage caused there."

Archer pointed out that an application has already been made for a watershed district along Walnut Creek.

He said that city and county officials should get together and start planning now.

"This is that big rain that comes every 25 years," Archer said. "The one we have to plan for is the one that hasn't come yet — the big rain that happens every 50 years."

French Reds Play Cautious

PARIS (AP)—The French Tricolor flies just below the red flag of communism on the flagpole above the Renault auto plant at Boulogne-Billancourt. The togetherness of the flags symbolizes the Communist party's cautious policy in France's crisis.

The massive, nationwide strike was begun spontaneously by rank-and-file workers demanding an end to a regime they say is based on privilege and capitalism. But cautious union leaders have turned the goals to bread-and-butter gains—higher pay, shorter hours and the like.

The leader in this move toward moderation has been the CGT, the General Confederation of Workers. It is the trade union arm of the French Communist party and the nation's biggest and most powerful union.

The American Legion Horseshoe Tournament will be open to all residents of Williamsport and Deercreek Township. There will be four classes with two prizes in each class. Playoffs will be at 2 p.m. Sunday, June 2. You must qualify before that.

Following are times set aside to qualify: May 29 — 6 to 8:30 p.m.; May 30 — 3:30 to 8:30 p.m.; May 31 — 6 to 8:30 p.m.; June 1 — 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m. You must be qualified by 8 p.m. Saturday in order to pitch Sunday. There will be a $1 entry fee with no limit to entries. Each contestant will pitch 50 shoes and there will be four selected in each class to pitch on Sunday.

Bicycle races will be that afternoon too. They are divided by different age groups starting with the tricycle gang. There is, of course, no entry fee here. They were a lot of fun last year and the more entries the more fun.

The President says to stay at home this year. Don't travel overseas. I guess that's why no one enlisted in the Army all week. Follow used to live up the street threatened to join the Foreign Legion for years, then found out that's what you join for . . . for years. He wouldn't have made it anyway. He would have been lost in the first sand storm. He was always getting lost around here and finally moved to Chillicothe . . . Now he just follows his nose home.

Some paint company is having a "work skipper" contest. I don't know the rules but know some work skippers. One fellow I know has a sign that he hangs up in the break area (a place set aside to rest and relax a bit). It says "GONE TO WORK — BE BACK IN TEN MINUTES".

You think you got it rough. Saturday afternoon, not a breeze a-blowing, a big limb suddenly dropped off a tree onto Bob Whaley's car smashing his windshield and otherwise banging it up. The cause is still unknown but it may have been that woodpecker that hangs around town. When he goes to work he sounds like an air hammer and splinters fly everywhere. I'm not saying he's the biggest in the country but he tore up four trees and a telephone pole last week. Pity Wright's Lumberyard if he ever finds it.

Speaking of birds, I walked into Fry's Drugstore last week. A beautiful spring morning it was. Some customers were sitting at the counter facing the door yelling "Get him! Get him!" . . . Looked to the right and there stood Jack Hanson with a gun. To the left was Red Fry with a broom over his head. I'm not naturally nervous, but backed off a little I'll tell you. A stranger in town would have torn the door down getting out, but over here you get used to such things. Turns out they were after a sparrow that had sought shelter during the night. Well, they chased him back and forth from one end to the other whooping and hollering and swinging that broom. BB's were flying everywhere. Customers were ducking behind counters and under tables. Marshal Whitesed came running in unlimbering his hog killer. The crowd outside was getting bigger by the minute. Traffic was snarled. Somebody wanted to set off the fire siren. If you don't think it was a touchy situation, I say a fat lot you know. They socked it to him in the back room. Somebody asked them why they hadn't just opened the door and let him out . . . Heard later they're still scratching their heads.

Read somewhere that three girls using computers could do the work of 100,000 mathematicians . . . Told Daryl Morrison and he just yawned . . . Said he doesn't care about mathematicians and computers.

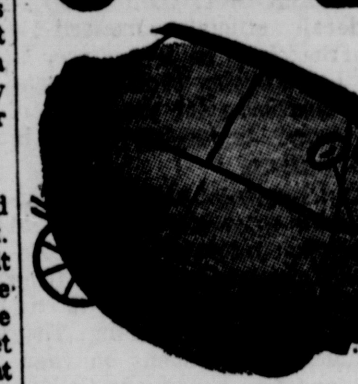

Out in California some college boys say they should be running the football team; saying who to play where and when. I hope to interview Westfall coaches about this to see if they would like the system. Maybe the coach could help to keep score or something. It might be a little advanced for high school though . . . probably just smart college kids could run their own team. One good point though, the fans could hop all over everybody instead of just the coach when their team lost.

That's about all. Don't forget the contest. The first person to send $5,000 to Box 127 Williamsport will get a statement in twenty-five words or less. (I stole that one, but for a deal like that who cares?).

Roads Closed,

At Circleville where about 80 families were evacuated, Red Cross workers were on duty feeding and housing residents who had to leave their homes. Most of the flooding there was from Hargus and Hominy creeks and Sgt. Roderick List of the Circleville Police Department said "If it weren't for the dam, we'd be floating down the river."

The Weather Bureau said flooding Hocking River in Athens and Hocking Counties was at 17.2 feet at 6 a.m. and rising against a flood stage of 17 feet. This usually means flooding of lowland areas such as the Ohio University's West Green but not the city itself.

At Enterprise in Hocking County the Hocking River at 7 a.m. had a 14.1 stage and rising against a flood stage of 12 feet. Many residents of low-lying areas along the river had to leave their homes in such periods, but most farmland is flooded.

The Weather Bureau, however said "anyone along the Hocking River subject to flooding should take all necessary precautions as moderate to major flooding will occur today."

An Emergency aid station was set up in the National Guard Armory at Athens and officials said about 150 persons would be housed there.

Most schools in Athens and surrounding Athens County were closed.

At least three roads blocked by water in Athens County also were blocked by landslides from hills adjacent to roadways.

The city of Chillicothe was virtually isolated by flood water. The only highway out of the town was U.S. 23 to the south.

Several families were evacuated from the Adena Lake area at the west edge of Chillicothe. The town received more than three inches of rain Thursday and since May 8 has received some rain every day except May 16.

The Scioto, which flows through southern Ohio counties to the Ohio River, was reaching the medium flooding stage at many points where the banks are low. Most of the low-lying areas along this stream's tributaries were already flooding.

The Ohio Highway Patrol reported some families in Fayette County and in the small Clinton County town of Sabina also had to be evacuated, as were some families in Chillicothe and at Rutland in Meigs County west of Pomeroy where Leeding Creek overflowed its banks. At Rutland some of the families being evacuated were affected by a creek covering Ohio 124 by several feet.

Some livestock in the Circleville area was endangered by floodwaters, the Pickaway County sheriff's office said. Several horses stabled at the county fairgrounds in Circleville had to be evacuated.

The weather bureau at Columbus said it measured nearly 2.5 inches of rain through Thursday and early today and that similar totals were recorded elsewhere in the state.

Circleville Police Chief Robert Temple said most of those evacuated from their homes were taken to the High Street and Atwater elementary schools to spend the rest of the night.

No boats were used in the evacuation, police said, but some were called for in case they were needed. A Civil Defense unit from Columbus arrived with boats and other equipment early today, and Red Cross workers also were on hand.

About 200 police, sheriff deputies, firemen and volunteers aided in the evacuation of the homes.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The U.S. Weather Bureau said here today that major flooding is expected on the Hocking River in Logan and Athens counties as rainfall amounts up to four inches occurred in the river basin during the past 24 hours.

The Bureau said these crests are expected: At Enterprise in Hocking County crest forecast 16 to 16.5 feet by Friday evening against flood stage of 12 feet. The stage at 7 a.m. today was 14.1 feet. At Athens, crest forecast at 22.5 feet early Saturday against flood stage of 17 feet. The stage at Athens at 7 a.m. was 17.2 feet.

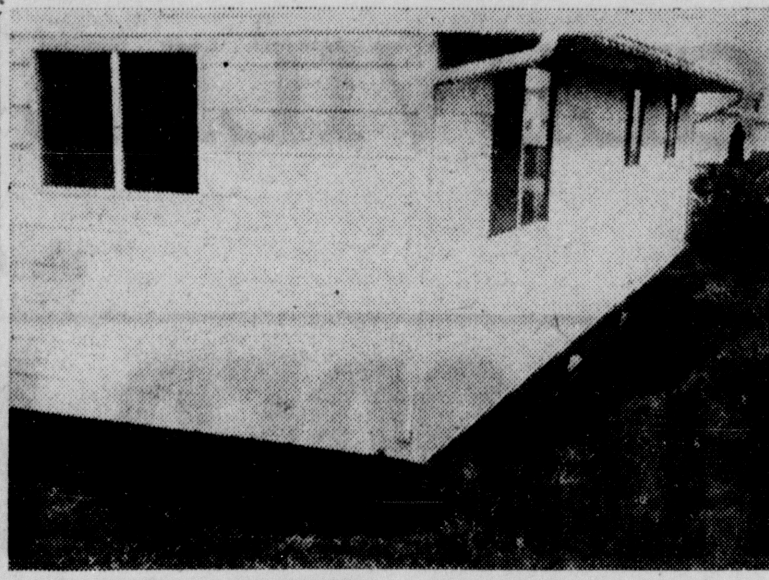

The Bureau said additional rainfall today would require adjustments to these stage forecasts. It advised all residents along the river who usually leave their homes at flooding time to take the necessary precautions.

Kent State Sets '68-'69 Budget

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Kent State University's 1968-69 budget will be $46.8 million.

The school's board of trustees approved it Thursday, revising the figure from $47.2 million after the Ohio board of regents refused to approve a $45 fee increase.

Trustees granted university President Robert I. White a $4,000 raise, boosting his yearly salary to $38,000.

WASHED-OUT FOUNDATION — This house in Ridgewood subdivision had its basement walls washed out during Thursday night's storm. The basement, finished in wood paneling, was filled with nearly five feet of mud when the two side walls split open allowing earth and rain to enter.

and many others were forced to leave their homes. Further down stream at Gold Cliff Park another family was rescued, while at the Cromley Egg factory on County Road 511, three families had to be evacuated.

Tom Elsea of Elsea Inc. provided a powerful outboard

motorboat to take the families to safety. Pickaway County Sheriff Dwight Radcliff directed rescue operations.

Schools which had to be closed in the county because of inundated roads were all schools in the Logan Elm district; Monroe, Williamsport and Jackson in the Westfall District.

Route 56 at Laurelville was inundated and house trailers parked on lots between Route 180 and Salt Creek were swept downstream by the force of the current.

IT WAS impossible to reach Laurelville during the peak of the flood.

Deputy Sheriff Warren Straley was on the road when the rain storms peaked. "It rained like it was pouring out of a bucket," Straley said.

He reported the hardest rains came about midnight. The floodwaters north of Circleville crested at about 3 a.m., and a little later in Circleville.

Along Scioto Creek south and east of town, the waters peaked at about 4:30 a.m.

Fences were literally flattened by the rushing waters. Fields were badly eroded, private lanes and bridges washed out.

She slammed on the brakes, lost control of her car and hit a large utility pole.

The car was demolished. Miss Fulk sustained a laceration of the tongue. Sally Baker, 19, Upper Sandusky, a passenger, sustained a scalp laceration, injury to the mouth and abrasions of the right knee.

THE girls were taken to Berger Hospital for treatment. Ralph Anderson, was hurrying to help his father, Ray Anderson, Route 1, when he lost control of his panel truck and upset on the Stoutsville Pike. He was uninjured.

The accidents were investigated by the Pickaway County Sheriff's Department.

Watershed Districts Are Needed

"Now is the time to start planning on watershed development," Don Archer, Pickaway District soil conservationist said today after viewing the damage caused by the flood.

"Two proposed flood control structures on Hominy Creek would have prevented the flooding in Circleville.

"Residents and landowners along Salt Creek were asked if they wanted to form a small watershed conservancy district, and they felt it was not needed," Archer reported.

"Flood control structures along the stream could have prevented much of the damage caused there.

Archer pointed out that an application has already been made for a watershed district along Walnut Creek.

He said that city and county officials should get together and start planning now.

"This is that big rain that comes every 25 years," Archer said. "The one we have to plan for is the one that hasn't come yet — the big rain that happens every 50 years."

French Reds Play Cautious

PARIS (AP) — The French Tricolor flies just below the red flag of communism on the flagpole above the Renault auto plant at Boulogne-Billancourt. The togetherness of the flags symbolizes the Communist party's cautious policy in France's grave crisis.

The massive, nationwide strike was begun spontaneously by rank-and-file workers demanding an end to a regime they say is based on privilege and capitalism. But cautious union leaders have turned the goals to bread-and-butter gains—higher pay, shorter hours and the like.

The leader in this move toward moderation has been the CGT, the General Confederation of Workers. It is the trade union arm of the French Communist party and the nation's biggest and most powerful union.

Rule Law Void

BOSTON (AP) — A three-judge federal court has ruled unconstitutional a Massachusetts law requiring families to live in the state for one year before becoming eligible for aid to dependent children.

Dear Abby: By Abigail Van Buren

Get the Lowdown on High Jinks

DEAR ABBY: Last Saturday night my husband and I went to the movies. Upon arriving home earlier than expected, we found our 15-year-old daughter on the couch with her boyfriend. They were all wrapped up in each other in a most disgusting position.

We ordered the boy out of the house and forbade our daughter ever to see him again. She flew into an angry rage and screamed that when two people are "in love" anything they did was "beautiful." She threatened to leave home if we don't let her see her boyfriend again.

What's a mother to do?

STUMPED
DEAR STUMPED: Try to be more understanding. Your daughter obviously doesn't know the difference between "love" and a healthy, normal, adolescent physical attraction. If you do, try to explain it to her. (If you don't, ask her to write to me and I'll try.)

I think you made a big mistake in ordering her boyfriend out of the house and forbidding your daughter ever to see him again. You should have had a frank talk with both of them about the dangers of playing with fire. The boy should have been made to feel welcome in your home, but only on your terms. (You make the "rules" as to how often he may come, how late he may stay, etc. If you drive them to meeting on the sneak elsewhere you will create worse problems.)

DEAR ABBY: I was born and raised right here in this small town, so I know nearly everyone and they know me. My problem: I get an invitation to every graduation, wedding, baby shower, tea and luncheon in town. Just name the occasion that calls for a gift, and I get my notice.

Abby, I am not cheap, and I don't mind sending gifts to my friends. But how about all these acquaintances?

Right now I am swamped with "invitations." I have a good name in town and don't want to ruin it. But I refuse to be a sucker to people I hardly know. What is your advice?

SWAMPED
DEAR SWAMPED: Every announcement and invitation is not necessarily a big broad hint for a gift. The best rule to follow is: If you would derive real pleasure out of sending a gift, send one. If you don't feel "close" enough to send a gift, send a card. If you feel like a "sucker," forget it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a bone to pick with you. Someone wrote and asked you if it was considered "proper" to use a toothpick in public and you said absolutely not.

Well, how come they sell fancy gold toothpicks in the finest stores?

SEEN THEM
DEAR SEEN: You will find toe-nail clippers and back scratchers in some of the "finest" stores, too, but that doesn't mean it's "proper" to use them in public.

DEAR ABBY: How well I understand that poor newlywed girl who wants some freedom and time to adjust before being "rushed" into pregnancy.

She is absolutely right. We waited 7 years before having a baby. We traveled, got solvent, entertained, and got to know and understand each other. Then we were relaxed and ready to care for a child.

Furthermore, we waited until our first child was 5 years old before we had another baby. They are 4 and 9 now, and they really "like" each other. They do many things together, but she has her friends and he has his. They do not compete as brothers and sisters who are "nearly the same age" do. Pushing one child aside for another is unfair. I cannot say enough for planned parenthood.

Show Doctor Exhorting Youths To Resist Draft

BOSTON (AP) — Television films of Dr. Benjamin Spock standing on the steps of the Justice Department building in Washington, exhorting young men to continue resisting the draft, have been shown to a federal jury trying the pediatrician and four others on antidraft charges.

"Remember, the greatest weapon the government has is division and we must not attack each other, we must stick together," Spock was heard to say in the film of an antidraft rally last Oct. 20.

Also seen and heard in the films projected Thursday was another defendant, Yale Chaplain William Sloane Coffin Jr., 43.

On trial with the 65-year-old baby doctor and Coffin are Mitchell Goodman, 44, a New York writer and teacher; Marcus Raskin, 33, a Washington research director; and Michael Ferber, 23, a graduate student at Harvard. All are charged with conspiring to counsel, aid and abet young Americans to evade and avoid the draft.

The government contends that during the rally, Coffin, Spock, Goodman, Raskin and others attempted to hand over a briefcase containing 185 draft cards and 172 classification cards to John McDonough, an assistant deputy U.S. attorney general, at a meeting inside the building in a deliberate violation of Selective Service laws.

The incident is one of several upon which the government based its indictments against the defendants, who face five-year prison terms and $10,000 fines if convicted.

Spock's remarks during the meeting, McDonough said, were confined to a condemnation of the Vietnam war and the claim that President Johnson was trying "to save face" by continuing the war.

McDonough did not accept the cards, but the government says the visitors left the briefcase on a table as they walked out.

Air Crewmen Risk Lives To Save 3 Men on Ground

By GEORGE McARTHUR
Associated Press Writer

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — Fire and smoke wreathed the Special Forces camp and the Viet Cong flag whipped when the radio crackled that three Americans were still down there.

An old C123 twin-engine Provider lowered through the battle haze and gingerly touched down on the debris-strewn airstrip. The crew found no one but on the take off run spotted three men waving desperately. The plane was going too fast, however, and was too low on fuel for another run.

Circling at 8,000 feet, a ruddy-faced, 45-year-old pilot listened to the radio. He snapped on his intercom and told his crew: "We're going in."

So began the last hazardous flight into Kham Duc, a mountain-ringed Green Berets' outpost some 45 miles southwest of Da Nang. Helicopters, four-engine Hercules turboprops and the smaller twin-engine Providers had already lifted out about 800 Americans, villagers and tribal irregulars. No one was supposed to be left.

The airstrip was littered with craters and the debris of destroyed helicopters. All day the evacuation transports had been taking hits. Enemy gunners shot down one Hercules. Now, in the afternoon, the fire grew heavier as two North Vietnamese regiments closed in on the jungle encampment.

Lt. Col. Joe Jackson, a one-time newspaper boy from Newnan, Ga., who recalls former Gov. Ellis Arnall as a customer, put the old transport plane in a near dive.

It should have been a routine check flight. As commander of the 113th Air Commando Squadron, Jackson normally doesn't fly much. This day he had arranged a flight with a check pilot, Maj. William Campbell, 37, Atascadero, Calif., as his copilot.

Jackson was taking a periodic flight check when his C123 was ordered over embattled Kham Duc.

The idea was to get down quickly to avoid antiaircraft fire and at the same time to pull up and land slowly. He had to stop on the runway without having to reverse his engines. It is normally a technical point, but reversing the engines cuts off the auxiliary jet pods beneath the Provider's wings. Starting those pod engines would take 40 long seconds. Jackson knew they might not have 40 seconds and he wanted that extra power for the take off under fire.

"I knew things were bad on the ground. You could see it," Jackson says. "We didn't have any trouble finding the base, it was all on fire. From the time we came in range, they opened up, firing from the bunkers and from below us as we approached."

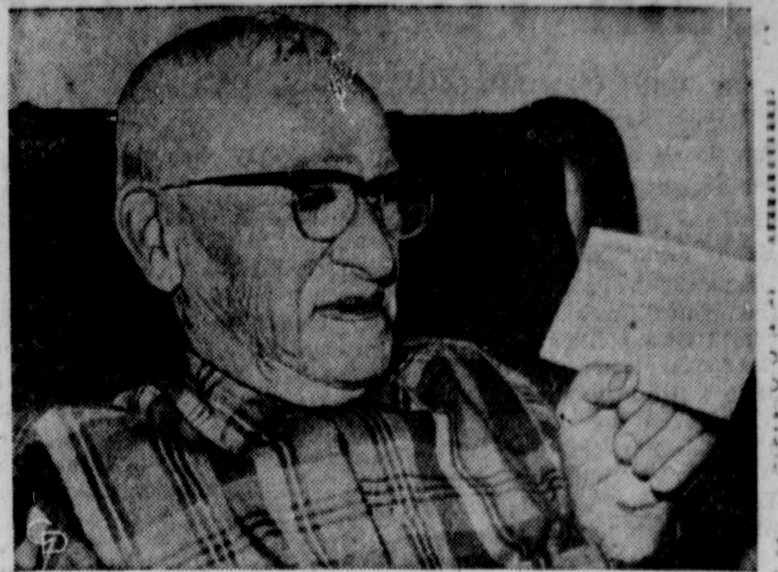

"God, look at all those machine guns," yelled copilot Campbell.

Jackson threaded the plane down the runway while Campbell and two crew members scanned the smoldering fortifications for the three Americans. Near the end of the airstrip, the three ran out — an Air Force officer in a blue flight suit and two enlisted men in camouflaged fatigues. They were members of the Air Force combat control team that normally ran the control tower at the small post. How they got left behind, no one knew.

As soon as they jumped on board, the loadmaster yelled "on board, clear to go" and we sure went," Jackson recalls. "We got out of there without a hole in the plane. I'll never understand it." The official record shows that Jackson's plane was on the ground no more than 120 seconds.

"That was eternity," Jackson says.

Sen. Dirksen Loses Again On Subversive Board Life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen has lost another round in his dogged bid to keep the moribund Subversive Activities Control Board alive beyond this year.

A desk-thumping, shouting speech in which Dirksen suggested he had backing from President Johnson and rallied at Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark failed to rally enough Senate support for the Illinois Republican's cause.

Dirksen had proposed a crime control bill amendment that would allow the attorneys-general of each of the 50 states to prosecute alleged subversive organizations before the board.

But amid opponents' complaints that the precedent-shattering approach went too far, the Senate turned him down, 49 to 27.

The board was the subject of widespread publicity last year with the disclosure it had not handled any business for nearly two years.

Its five members each draw $26,000 a year.

The agency was spotlighted in mid-1967 when it was learned that the latest appointee was a 29-year-old accountant, Simon F. McHugh Jr., who had married one of President Johnson's secretaries.

That development prompted inquiries into the board's operations. When its inactive status was disclosed, cries arose in Congress for its abolition.

But Dirksen moved to preserve it. He finally won approval of a measure providing that it continue in operation provided at least one case was brought before it by next Dec. 31.

The agency was set up 17 years ago during the anti-Communist activity sparked by the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R-Wis.

Its original authority was to identify subversives and subversive organizations and compel them to register.

But Supreme Court decisions have stricken most of the basic authority of the agency. Dirksen charged that Clark was "subverting and distorting" the intent of Congress by not bringing any cases before the SACB.

DEAR ABBY: Last Saturday night my husband and I went to the movies. Upon arriving home earlier than expected, we found our 15-year-old daughter on the couch with her boyfriend. They were all wrapped up in each other in a most disgusting position.

We ordered the boy out of the house and forbade our daughter ever to see him again. She flew into an angry rage and screamed that when two people are "in love" anything they did was "beautiful." She threatened to leave home if we don't let her see her boyfriend again.

What's a mother to do?

STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Try to be more understanding. Your daughter obviously doesn't know the difference between "love" and a healthy, normal, adolescent physical attraction. If you do, try to explain it to her. (If you don't, ask her to write to me and I'll try.)

I think you made a big mistake in ordering her boyfriend out of the house and forbidding your daughter ever to see him again. Sam Yorth, Prophet

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN
Mayor Sam Yorth of Los Angeles is a pro who keeps his predictions apart from his desires. He owes nothing to Bobby Kennedy, who is the last Democrat he wants to see in the White House. But as one who knows politics Sam thinks Bobby should win the California June 4 primary "because there will be no one on the ballot against him except Senator McCarthy." "With his money," Yorth adds, "Bobby Kennedy will just overwhelm McCarthy."

Sam Yorth is an unusual politician because he doesn't "demagogue it." He is on the outs with all people who try to relate failure in the war on poverty to the war in Vietnam, which means that he can't very well support Eugene McCarthy as an alternative to Bobby Kennedy. This means that Sam Yorth is playing no part in Democratic primary politics, and it might mean that he will have to go for the Republican

Nixon next fall as he did back in 1960.

As Yorth has been telling people up and down California, the Communists have been taking "a piggy-back ride on the civil rights movement and the war on poverty" in order to "turn them into a resistance against our efforts in Vietnam." Once they had successfully tied the future of anti-poverty with ending the war in Vietnam, the Communists had won the biggest propaganda victory in modern times.

"The first person of any note that I heard make this link," says Yorth, "was Bobby Kennedy. He did it a long time ago at a civil rights meeting in Louisiana, just prior to the time I testified before his committee in Washington. My reference to this link, and the fact that Bobby said it, I told him then and I say it now that it was an element of demagoguery to try to pit the poor people against the war to make them think the war is depriving them of something they would otherwise have."

Sam Yorth is sticking his neck out when he says things like this for practically everybody thinks there will be more to go round for poor people in peace no matter how the war in Vietnam is liquidated. But the "how" of peace matters desperately. Where, aside from a maverick or two like Yorth, is there a politician who dares tell the truth about what is going to happen to the world if the U.S. makes a French-type peace in Vietnam? Yorth fears that the coming Presidential election "is going to be a test of the ability of . . . American voters to really understand the great issues in the world today and to be able to penetrate through the . . . Madison Avenue written speeches . . . the propaganda, the sales techniques and all the things you can buy with money."

This is a terrible year for a politician to be saying realistic things about what will happen if there is an American pullout from Vietnam. Who dares to say that in case of pullout our credibility as the world's guarantee against Communist nuclear blackmail will be destroyed? Who dares to point out that Japan will no longer regard our atomic umbrella as anything other than a sieve? Who dares to mention that the West Germans will have to make their deals with Moscow? The hopeful winds that have been stirring in Czechoslovakia and Rumania will die away if America capitulates at Paris, for, with the U.S. having declared its unwillingness to support freedom movements outside its own borders, the U.S.S.R. would not fear "world opinion" if it were to move against Prague and Bucharest as it once moved against freedom in Hungary. But what politician dares link U.S. fortitude in Vietnam to liberty for Czechs?

When the French pulled out of Vietnam, it made little difference to the world balance, which depended then, as it does now, on U.S. strength. But if the U.S. decides to behave like France, what then? There will be — i.e., wars for Communism — wars of "liberation" everywhere. With various countries in the world batten down the hatches, trade and travel will diminish, currencies will get even more out of phase, the isolationist "Fortress America" movement will grow, and the poor will be more neglected than ever simple because the investment that pays taxes will dry up.

Sam Yorth will then seem like one of the prophets, but it will be too late to do us any good.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Mary Martin says "let's hit the road," she implies no half-way measures. Here is the itinerary she and Robert Preston are following with their Broadway hit, "I Do! I Do!":

Rochester, Indianapolis, Minneapolis, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Vancouver, B.C., Seattle, Portland, St. Louis, Phoenix, Omaha, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Dallas, Houston, Cleveland, Memphis, Charlotte, Greensboro, Richmond, Washington, D.C., Baltimore, Detroit, Philadelphia, Raleigh, Miami, Jacksonville, Hershey, Pa.

That will take them through March 1969. Still unbooked are April and May, after which the tour ends and Mary and her husband, Richard Halliday, plan to spend two years on their ranch in Brazil. "That is a promise we made to each other; we even signed a paper to that effect on our last anniversary," she insists.

Mary Martin is the last of the great Broadway stars to devote her talents to "the road," that is, to tour the major American cities with a play that has met with success in New York. Oddly enough, she fell in love with the traveling bug during her brief movie career.

"It was after I had made 'The Great Victor Herbert,' and Paramount sent Allan Jones and me out on the road to publicize it," she recalled. "We traveled all over, playing seven shows a day. Think of it—seven shows a day! But I loved it. And while I was in Houston, I was lucky enough to meet Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, who were traveling with 'Taming of the Shrew'."

"I naturally worshiped them as greats of the theater, and I listened to everything they said. One thing they told me was: 'If you should go back to the theater, be sure to go on the road with your plays. You will find the audiences enormously stimulating, and those people will come to see you whenever they visit New York.'"

"As it turned out, I decided I did prefer the theater. I left films and never went back except for doing 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy' for Cole Porter (in the film biography, 'Night and Day')."

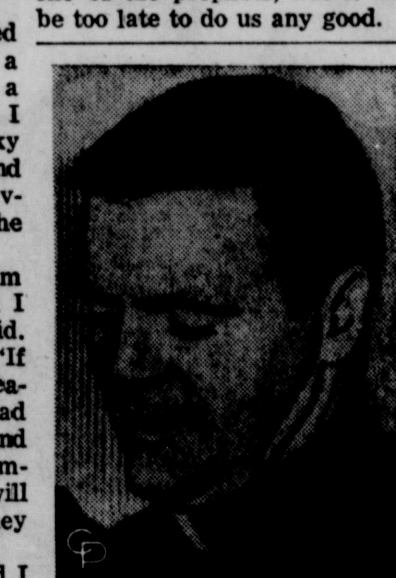

Miss Martin has toured in "One Touch of Venus," "Annie Get Your Gun," "Peter Pan," "Kind Sir," "Skin of Our Teeth," "Hello, Dolly!" and with her own concert, which visited 87 cities. She didn't tour with her two biggest hits "South Pacific" and "The Sound of Music" because they remained in New York too long.

"The second year of a New York show is miserable," she remarked. "No matter how much you like the play, you are faced with going down the same street, entering the same stage door and using the same dressing room until you almost go out of your mind."

"That's why I prefer to go on the road in the second year. Sure, the traveling is rough, but at least you're looking at the show through a different frame every week. And the audiences can be a revelation."

"Take 'I Do! I Do!' It's a show about marriage—how two people can live together for 50 years and somehow survive all the problems that confront them. Now in New York we got laughs in the right places and the audiences were usually warm. But New Yorkers go to the theater because it's the thing to do. They don't necessarily go for enjoyment."

"The difference on the road is that the people are buying tickets to see Bob and me. They truly want to see the show. And the audience response is unbelievable. They seem to accept the fact that a show about two old married people can be enjoyable."

This column has strongly supported that Pennsylvania housewife's demand that she be given the chance to become a professional baseball league umpire. We're for fair play — and the fairer the better!

Baseball officials, opposed to the lady's request, apparently did so in the belief that a woman's place is in the home — not at home plate.

With their housekeeping experience, women might do a better job than men at some umpiring chores — such as doing a neater job dusting off home plate!

Who knows but what equipment manufacturers, should women become umpires, may have to set up shop in a beauty parlor? That's where they generally get their face masks.

Women, incidentally, should feel at home making baseball decisions, for they, like male umpires, always have the last word in any argument.

Summoned to account for his failure, the manager wailed, "We can't put our finger on what's wrong. We serve fine food, the liquor is the best, and our service is excellent." "Then there's something wrong with your strip-teasers," he was told. "Impossible," protested the manager. "Every one of them has been a model Party member since 1922!"

Speaking of Your Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

The disease of chronic alcoholism is under constant study by teams of research workers in many major hospitals of America.

Alcoholism is a disease, a severe organic, physical, chemical, and emotional disease. When this is recognized without shame then families whose lives are always tottering on the brink of destruction because of the "hidden alcoholic" will speak out their secret problem and secret shame to their doctors.

Chronic alcoholism as a disease is only a shame when it is neglected and when it is permitted to inflict the devastation it does on families and communities.

Dr. Frank A. Seixas is editor of the Physician's Alcohol Newsletter which compiles and distributes the most modern medical, chemical, and psychological advances to physicians all over the world in an effort to retrieve the chronic alcoholic from degradation and the destruction of a valuable life.

It is admitted that Alcoholics Anonymous is probably one of the single most potent forces in the rehabilitation of the alcoholic and has returned thousands of functioning productive citizens. Dr. Seixas acknowledges the importance of Alcoholics Anonymous and urges that the alcoholic come out of hiding in order to be helped to survive by this agency and the other methods that are now available.

A center for the study and treatment of alcoholism is called ACCEPT which functions under the supervision of the medical society of the county of New York. In conjunction with community and social organizations, psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, and physicians are combining their efforts to study and treat the total person in his own social surroundings.

Lectures and orientation programs are given to doctors, nurses, probation officers, and the clergy in an effort to stem the destructive tide that takes hundreds of thousands of alcoholics out of the world of the functioning population.

There is no single treatment for this disease and, therefore, there must be complete coordination of all treatments available in the positive pursuit of the rehabilitation of the alcoholic and in the prevention of the illness in the young adult.

Dr. Arnold Zetner, a psychiatrist working with ACCEPT, said, "Frequently the alcoholic's job is the last remaining vestige of self-esteem that the patient (the alcoholic) still has available to him." He points out the interesting concept that when his job is threatened, this becomes a more "effective deterrent" than even the jeopardy to his marriage or his health. Concentration on this approach, in addition to all others, has been very effective in inducing the alcoholic to seek help.

The Business World

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten years ago members of the upstart mutual fund industry and the old-line insurance industry, being clearly of different castes, hardly had a word to say to each other. Now they are intermarrying.

More than 60 affiliations already have been consummated and several large ones, involving assets in the hundreds of millions of dollars, are likely to be announced. Several well known insurers are planning their own funds.

Presently engaged to enter some sort of financial arrangement are Tsai Management & Research Corp., operator of the $500 million Manhattan Fund, and CNA Financial Corp., a holding company with assets of more than $2.6 billion, mostly in insurance.

To accommodate each other, personalities are evolving in both insurance, with more than $200 billion in assets, and the funds, whose assets recently reached $46 billion.

For example, seeking to avoid rigid limitations on investments and to bring mutual funds into the family, insurers are re-forming as holding companies. And some funds which never had their own sales forces are seeking now to capitalize on the existing sales forces of the insurers.

The most basic change, however, is in the attitude of insurers, who through the years have argued that a guaranteed, fixed-dollar return to investors was the bedrock of their business.

Increasingly, these insurers have found it more difficult to sell fixed-dollar policies, which are eroded by inflation. As a result, insurance sales continue to rise each year but the industry's percentage of the savings dollars shrinks.

In courting the mutual funds, whose values rise and fall with the stock market and thus are considered a hedge against inflation, the insurers have acknowledged the value of investments with a variable return.

"They have validated the mutual fund industry," said Fred Carr, portfolio manager of the Enterprise Fund, whose swift growth in assets results largely from earning a return of 113 per cent last year while fixed-return investments diminished in value.

As a result of this acknowledgment, a new and still not fully formulated sales concept is developing. Howard Reeder, CNA head, explains it this way: "When somebody calls you to talk about insurance, immediately you are likely to stiffen up. But if I call you and say I want to talk about family security, about financial planning, you are much more likely to see me."

Added Reeder: "The Fuller Brush Man has to have a complete line of brushes." And so, should CNA merge with Manhattan, it will earn profits from real estate, health-casualty-life insurance, and stocks.

Just how CNA and other holding companies and insurers will market their products is another matter. Indications are that

Manhattan Fund, for example, will continue to operate independent of CNA insurance companies.

Gradually, however, it is expected that insurance salesmen will offer to customers package deals involving funds and insurance, the ratio to be worked out not by a rigid formula but after consulting with the customer.

Reeder, in fact, has plans to put his insurance salesmen through mutual fund courses to prepare them for registration as securities dealers.

The affiliations, no matter in what form, are bound to arouse controversy for a long time to come.

First, the sheer size of the mergers and working agreements will result in concentrations of financial power that are bound to arouse the interest of regulatory officials.

Such large amounts of funds will also make a solid impact on the stock market. Some analysts feel the insurance-mutual fund alliance will cause volatility. Others feel a temporary stock shortage and rising prices could result.

Next, there is a great deal of doubt among managers of existing funds about the ability of the insurers to play the game successfully. Should the insurers fail, customers could be alienated from both types of investments.

A dispute over regulatory matters also seems inevitable. The Securities and Exchange Commission regulates stocks, but state agencies regulate insurance companies.

According to Boyle

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — "I'm not a spooned idealist, but I don't feel art has any particular equation with economics," said Norman Jewison.

At 41 still known as "the boy director," Jewison, like Mike Nichols, is one of the new breed of producer-directors whose innovative genius is turning Hollywood upside down.

They, rather than actors, are threatening to become the new "stars" of the industry. They have brought it a fresh excitement.

Norman is slender, tousle-haired, and has quick brown eyes that flare with eagerness as he talks. His hands move like those of a poetic boxer—reaching, searching, describing the thoughts that pour in ready torrent from his restless mind.

"Pictures are getting better," he said, "because they reflect the greater freedom we now have artistically."

"Talent has a greater chance to show itself to experiment. At last people are beginning to realize that good films are an individualistic statement of life, that they do have some point of view."

"I believe in individualism. I'm terrified of corporate entities."

His belief is symbolically expressed in his latest picture, "The Thomas Crown Affair," starring Steve McQueen and Faye Dunaway.

McQueen plays a millionaire whose secret hobby is robbing banks just to show he can beat the Establishment. Faye is a ruthless insurance investigator hired to "get his head," who succeeds only in winning his heart.

The two hold an animated two-minute kiss that should interest oral surgeons as profoundly as it does ordinary movie fans.

"It's one of the longest kisses on film," said Jewison, who is reconciled to the need of providing thrills as well as a message to an audience.

Norman, Canadian-born, worked his way through the University of Toronto by driving a cab and waiting on tables. After a spell of television script-writing and acting in London, he returned to Canada and made a name for himself in television production there.

Hollywood called him after he had widened his reputation with a number of video specials in this country for Judy Garland, Harry Belafonte, Danny Kaye, Jackie Gleason and Andy Williams.

Jewison proved he had the golden touch by turning out several films, such as "The Thrill of It All," starring Doris Day and James Garner, that made box office music.

That, he felt, gave him the larger freedom to make the more challenging films he yearned to do. He responded to the opportunity, in rapid order, a profit.

Sam Yorth, Prophet

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN
Mayor Sam Yorth of Los Angeles is a pro who keeps his predictions apart from his desires. He owes nothing to Bobby Kennedy, who is the last Democrat he wants to see in the White House. But as one who knows politics Sam thinks Bobby should win the California June 4 primary "because there will be no one on the ballot against him except Senator McCarthy." "With his money," Yorth adds, "Bobby Kennedy will just overwhelm McCarthy."

Sam Yorth is an unusual politician because he doesn't "demagogue it." He is on the outs with all people who try to relate failure in the war on poverty to the war in Vietnam, which means that he can't very well support Eugene McCarthy as an alternative to Bobby Kennedy. This means that Sam Yorth is playing no part in Democratic primary politics, and it might mean that he will have to go for the Republican

Nixon next fall as he did back in 1960.

As Yorth has been telling people up and down California, the Communists have been taking "a piggy-back ride on the civil rights movement and the war on poverty" in order to "turn them into a resistance against our efforts in Vietnam." Once they had successfully tied the future of anti-poverty with ending the war in Vietnam, the Communists had won the biggest propaganda victory in modern times.

"The first person of any note that I heard make this link," says Yorth, "was Bobby Kennedy. He did it a long time ago at a civil rights meeting in Louisiana, just prior to the time I testified before his committee in Washington. My reference to this link, and the fact that Bobby said it, was what really irritated him. I told him then and I say it now that it was an element of demagoguery to try to pit the poor people against the war to

Sam Yorth is sticking his neck out when he says things like this for practically everybody thinks there will be more to go round for poor people in peace no matter how the war in Vietnam is liquidated. But the "how" of peace matters desperately. Where, aside from a maverick or two like Yorth, is there a politician who dares tell the truth about what is going to happen to the world if the U.S. makes a French-type peace in Vietnam? Yorth fears that the coming Presidential election "is going to be a test of the ability of . . . American voters to really understand the great issues in the world today and to be able to penetrate through the . . . Madison Avenue written speeches . . . the propaganda, the sales techniques and all the things you can buy with money."

This is a terrible year for a politician to be saying realistic things about what will happen if there is an American pullout from Vietnam. Who dares to say that in case of pullout our credibility as the world's guarantee against Communist nuclear blackmail will be destroyed? Who dares to point out that Japan will no longer regard our atomic umbrella as anything other than a sieve? Who dares to mention that the West Germans will have to make their deals with Moscow? While this program continues, research chemists and scientists are studying the means to combat destruction of the liver, the stomach and the intestines by chemical means. Unfortunately, cirrhosis of the liver in the chronic alcoholic is not easily reversible. Prevention, therefore, is the ideal approach.

Families who live in the shadow of imminent destruction by the hidden alcoholic in their midst must emphatically bring it out into the open if there is to be any hope for the rehabilitation of the alcoholic and the preservation of so many valuable lives.

Firm direct pressure can almost always stop active bleeding.

For example, seeking to avoid rigid limitations on investments and to bring mutual funds into the family, insurers are reforming as holding companies. And some funds which never had their own sales forces are seeking now to capitalize on the existing sales forces of the insurers.

The most basic change, however, is in the attitude of insurers, who through the years have argued that a guaranteed, fixed-dollar return to investors was the bedrock of their business.

Increasingly, these insurers have found it more difficult to sell fixed-dollar policies, which are eroded by inflation. As a result, insurance sales continue to rise each year but the industry's percentage of the savings dollars shrinks.

In courting the mutual funds, whose values rise and fall with the stock market and thus are considered a hedge against inflation, the insurers have acknowledged the value of investments with a variable return.

"They have validated the mutual fund industry," said Fred Carr, portfolio manager of the Enterprise Fund, whose swift growth in assets results largely from earning a return of 113 per cent last year while fixed-return investments diminished in value.

As a result of this acknowledgment, a new and still not fully formulated sales concept is developing. Howard Reeder, CNA head, explains it this way: "When somebody calls you to talk about insurance, immediately you are likely to stiffen up. But if I call you and say I want to talk about family security, about financial planning, you are much more likely to see me."

Added Reeder: "The Fuller Brush Man has to have a complete line of brushes." And so, should CNA merge with Manhattan, it will earn profits from real estate, health-casualty-life insurance, and stocks.

Just how CNA and other holding companies and insurers will market their products is another matter. Indications are that

Manhattan Fund, for example, will continue to operate independent of CNA insurance companies.

Gradually, however, it is expected that insurance salesmen will offer to customers package deals involving funds and insurance, the ratio to be worked out not by a rigid formula but after consulting with the customer.

Reeder, in fact, has plans to put his insurance salesmen through mutual fund courses to prepare them for registration as securities dealers.

The affiliations, no matter in what form, are bound to arouse controversy for a long time to come.

First, the sheer size of the mergers and working agreements will result in concentrations of financial power that are bound to arouse the interest of regulatory officials.

Such large amounts of funds will also make a solid impact on the stock market. Some analysts feel the insurance-mutual fund alliance will cause volatility. Others feel a temporary stock shortage and rising prices could result.

Next, there is a great deal of doubt among managers of existing funds about the ability of the insurers to play the game successfully. Should the insurers fail, customers could be alienated from both types of investments.

A dispute over regulatory matters also seems inevitable. The Securities and Exchange Commission regulates stocks, but state agencies regulate insurance companies.

According to Boyle

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — "I'm not a spoonfed idealist, but I don't feel art has any particular equation with economics," said Norman Jewison.

At 41 still known as "the boy director," Jewison, like Mike Nichols, is one of the new breed of producer-directors whose innovative genius is turning Hollywood upside down.

They, rather than actors, are threatening to become the new "stars" of the industry. They have brought it a fresh excitement.

Norman is slender, tousle-haired, and has quick brown eyes that flare with eagerness as he talks. His hands move like those of a poetic boxer—reaching, searching, describing the thoughts that pour in ready torrent from his restless mind.

"Pictures are getting better," he said, "because they reflect the greater freedom we now have artistically."

"Talent has a greater chance to show itself to experiment. At last people are beginning to realize that good films are an individualistic statement of life, that they do have some point of view."

"I believe in individualism. I'm terrified of corporate entities."

His belief is symbolically expressed in his latest picture, "The Thomas Crown Affair," starring Steve McQueen and Faye Dunaway.

McQueen plays a millionaire whose secret hobby is robbing banks just to show he can beat the Establishment. Faye is a ruthless insurance investigator hired to "get his head," who succeeds only in winning his heart.

The two hold an animated two-minute kiss that should interest oral surgeons as profoundly as it does ordinary movie fans.

"It's one of the longest kisses on film," said Jewison, who is reconciled to the need of providing thrills as well as a message to an audience.

Norman, Canadian-born, worked his way through the University of Toronto by driving a cab and waiting on tables. After a spell of television script-writing and acting in London, he returned to Canada and made a name for himself in television production there.

Hollywood called him after he had widened his reputation with a number of video specials in this country for Judy Garland, Harry Belafonte, Danny Kaye, Jackie Gleason and Andy Williams.

Jewison proved he had the golden touch by turning out several films, such as "The Thrill of It All," starring Doris Day and James Garner, that made box office music.

That, he felt, gave him the larger freedom to make the more challenging films he yearned to do. He responded to the opportunity, in rapid order, with "The Cincinnati Kid," "The Russians Are Coming," and "In the Heat of the Night," which won five academy awards.

The volatile young director feels that dialogue is becoming less important as the world becomes more oriented to images than words or phrases.

"Films are the novels of our time," he remarked. But he believes they must become more imaginative, "be rooted in a basic truth, and have something to say."

"Film must be treated in this country as more of an art form than it has in the past. I recognize that films have to pay their way, but there are still too many people in the industry motivated by profit rather than art."

Jewison is one who, those who hold the purse strings feel, can be trusted to create both art and a profit.

'Death of God' Furor Dying Out

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Like a passing storm, the "death of God" furor seems to be dying out today in theological circles. It's a "bursting bubble," says Anglican Bishop John A. T. Robinson.

However, many church scholars say the temporary shock value of the approach may have served a useful purpose in religious thought.

They say it's spurring renewed efforts at understanding the divine in life, and purging easy going, old assumptions.

A "special opportunity" is being offered current theology "in the aftermath of the 'death of God' episode," writes the Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Oden, of the graduate theological school of Philip's University, Emid, Okla.

"We are now being forced into much more primal theological territory. We are being confronted with the much more profound question of the reality of God."

Actually, the "death of God" speculations generally did not mean that divinity itself had ceased to exist, but rather that the modern scientific culture obscured it, and humanity seemed largely unaware and independent of it.

Christians must learn to live in a world "without God," the late German theologian Dietrich Bonhoeffer put it before he died, a firm believer, at Nazi hands. But his writings set the stage for the ensuing "death of God" ferment.

The catchphrase, actually a 1965 revival of a 19th century shibboleth by German philosopher Nietzsche, also was used to point to the demise of tradition-bound, manipulative, self-serving images of God current in Western society.

They were dead, the funeral announcers said.

But if the old, utilitarian definitions don't specify God, or have become meaningless idols in an age when He seems to many to be absent from the technological scene, then theologians must grapple anew with "basic issues" of reality, Dr. Oden says.

"We can rejoice that we have been stung and shocked out of our drowsiness and complacency by the God of history," he writes in the Christian student magazine, Motive.

In a way, he says, it appears to be a "tremendous regression, a giant step backward," by which theologians must start over again "with the ABCs."

How this is to be done, he adds, is the present challenge.

First, says Roman Catholic Cardinal Leo J. Suenens of Belgium, "we must take away the false images" and get rid of "simplistic ways" of thinking of God.

"With the false images stripped away," he told an Oakland, Calif., audience, "God is then realized as a hidden God who can never be expressed in all His essence."

As another Catholic theologian, the Rev. Gregory Baum, of Toronto, put it: "From the beginning, the biblical faith has demanded that men do not make for themselves images of God. Every image of God which men produce is to be rejected as idolatry.

"No image of God is adequate, and if men do regard it as adequate, they become idolatrous or superstitious."

This is why Judeo-Christianity, in affirming God's presence in human life, is "most cautious, hesitant and often uses a language which is close to that of agnostics," he says.

"The critique overruling everything we say about God is called 'negative theology.' God is ineffable. God cannot be named. A Christian cannot say precisely what God is like. A Christian can only say precisely what God is not like. This is the inevitable situation of the biblical faith."

Marinated Suggestions Get the Season Going

By ALICE DENHOFF
"Getting with it" is the big thing in marinating meat, fish, or fowl. Meat is more tender after several hours or days in a well-spiced marinade and all foods are given good aroma. If you haven't done much with marinades, do experiment. It's easy enough and takes no time at all to measure out the ingredients that go into a good marinade. Place food to be marinated in the smallest possible bowl which will hold it in order to give the marinade the greatest possible effect. Long thin strips of meat need less time in a marinade than do chunky cuts. Kebabs need only a few hours, while an 8-pound roast should be marinated at least 24 hours. Outdoor cooking season is on us. So let's marinate. Here is a suggestion:

MARINATED KEBABS
1-3 c. lemon juice
1-3 c. wine vinegar
1 tsp. soy sauce
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. black pepper
1/2 tsp. salt
2 lb. leg of lamb
Combine first 6 ingredients. Heat then cool. Trim and discard excess fat from lamb. Cut into 1 1/2" cubes and mix with marinade. Refrigerate 10 hr., turning occasionally. To cook, string on skewers. Broil over charcoal fire 10 to 15 min. or until done, turning frequently to cook uniformly.
Yield is 6 portions.

Here's another kebab version:
SPICY BEEF KEBABS
2 tsp. instant minced onion
2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. chili powder
1 tsp. garlic salt
1/2 tsp. ground thyme
1/2 tsp. oregano leaves
1/2 tsp. ground ginger
1/2 tsp. black pepper
1 bay leaf, crumbled
3 tsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. cider vinegar
1/2 c. salad oil
2 lb. boneless sirloin beef
Frankfurter rolls
Combine first 12 ingredients in a medium-sized bowl. Cut beef into 1 1/2" cubes. Add to marinade. Let it marinate at room temperature 4 to 5 hours. String meat on skewers. Broil over charcoal fire or in an over broiler 10 to 15 min., turning skewers frequently to brown on all sides. Serve between split frankfurter buns. This yields 6 portions. Now for a chicken special:

CHICKEN BARBECUE IN MARINADE SAUCE
1 tsp. mixed pickling spice
1 tsp. poultry seasoning
1/2 tsp. salt
1 can (10 1/2 oz.) beef bouillon
1 1/2 tsp. lemon juice
2 (2 lb. each) broiler-fryer chickens, quartered
Combine first 6 ingredients in saucepan. Bring to boiling point; remove from heat. Place chicken in a close-fitting pan or bowl. Pour in warm marinade. Cool and refrigerate to marinate a full 24 hours, turning several times.
Remove chicken from marinade; drain. Place on grill over glowing coals or in broiler with oven control set to very hot (450 degrees F.). Cook to brown on both sides until chicken is cooked through, about 20 min., over the grill on each side. Baste with marinade sauce as often as the chicken looks dry.
This makes 4 portions.

Plans were completed for a breakfast June 11, at the home of Mrs. Al Thomas on Wood Lane. All ladies of the church are invited to share in this morning of fellowship.

Choose Names For Hurricanes

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The first hurricane of the year, yet unspawned, was christened Abby on Thursday.

She isn't expected until after June 1 when the hurricane season officially begins, but the weather watchers at Miami's hurricane center decided they would be ready with her name and names for her 22 sisters.

Brenda and Candy will follow Abby.

Then will come Dolly, Edna, Frances, Gladys and Hannah, which is as far as the names went last year as Heidi ended the hurricane season off the coast of Ireland.

RFK Turns to Humphrey As Main Oregon Opponent

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Listening to Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, one would never know he is running against Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy in the Oregon presidential primary.

The New York Democrat is ignoring the Minnesota Democrat and turning his campaign guns exclusively on Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

And he is escalating his anti-Humphrey attack each day. For a candidate who has won three primaries, Kennedy's organization appears less than supremely confident as the May 28 Oregon balloting approaches.

His increasing attention to Humphrey is largely a result of public opinion polls, including his own, that show a combined Johnson-Humphrey vote close to his own.

Kennedy is telling the public if he loses here, Humphrey's chances for the presidential nomination would be greatly enhanced.

Kennedy and his strategists say Humphrey's supporters are spending vast sums to persuade Oregonians to vote for President Johnson, whose name is on the state's ballot, as a show of support for the vice president.

Thus, while McCarthy is the only Democrat openly campaigning against Kennedy, the New Yorker is paying him no attention. He hopes by this approach to avoid hard feelings and woo the support of McCarthy supporters should McCarthy drop out of contention.

The day Humphrey announced his candidacy, Kennedy let it be known the vice president's entry would create scarcely a ripple in his own campaign strategy until the primaries were over and he had dispatched McCarthy.

But since coming into Oregon, whose politics the Kennedy machine seems to find inscrutable, Kennedy has daily and with mounting vigor denounced Humphrey's "politics of happiness and joy."

Marinated Suggestions Get the Season Going

By ALICE DENHOFF
"Getting with it" is the big thing in marinating meat, fish, or fowl. Meat is more tender after several hours or days in a well-spiced marinade and all foods are given good aroma. If you haven't done much with marinades, do experiment. It's easy enough and takes no time at all to measure out the ingredients that go into a good marinade. Place food to be marinated in the smallest possible bowl which will hold it in order to give the marinade the greatest possible effect. Long thin strips of meat need less time in a marinade than do chunky cuts. Kebabs need only a few hours, while an 8-pound roast should be marinated at least 24 hours. Outdoor cooking season is on us. So let's marinate. Here is a suggestion:

MARINATED KEBABS

1-3 c. lemon juice
1-3 c. wine vinegar
1 tsp. soy sauce
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. black pepper
1/2 tsp. salt
2 lb. leg of lamb

Combine first 6 ingredients. Heat then cool. Trim and discard excess fat from lamb. Cut into 1 1/2" cubes and mix with marinade. Refrigerate 10 hr., turning occasionally. To cook, string on skewers. Broil over charcoal fire 10 to 15 min. or until done, turning frequently to cook uniformly.

Yield is 6 portions.

Here's another kebab version:

SPICY BEEF KEBABS

2 tsp. instant minced onion
2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. chili powder
1/2 tsp. garlic salt
1/2 tsp. ground thyme
1/4 tsp. oregano leaves
1/4 tsp. ground ginger
1/4 tsp. black pepper
1 bay leaf, crumbled
3 tsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. cider vinegar
1/2 c. salad oil
2 lb. boneless sirloin beef
Frankfurter rolls

Combine first 12 ingredients in a medium-sized bowl. Cut beef into 1 1/2" cubes. Add to marinade. Let it marinate at room temperature 4 to 5 hours. String meat on skewers. Broil over charcoal fire or in an over broiler 10 to 15 min., turning skewers frequently to brown on all sides. Serve between split frankfurter buns. This yields 6 portions. Now for a chicken special:

CHICKEN BARBECUE IN MARINADE SAUCE

1 tsp. mixed pickling spice

1/2 tsp. salt
1 can (10 1/2 oz.) beef bouillon

2 (2 lb. each) broiler-fryer chickens, quartered

Combine first 6 ingredients in saucepan. Bring to boiling point; remove from heat. Place chicken in a close-fitting pan or bowl. Pour in warm marinade. Cool and refrigerate to marinate a full 24 hours, turning several times.

Remove chicken from marinade; drain. Place on grill over glowing coals or in broiler with oven control set to very hot (450 degrees F.). Cook to brown on both sides until chicken is cooked through, about 20 min., over the grill on each side. Baste with marinade sauce as often as the chicken looks dry.

St. Philip's Church To Use 1817 Service

Sunday, May 26, marks the 151st anniversary of the founding of the congregation of St. Philip's Episcopal Church in Circleville.

On this day in 1817, the parish records state that "the Rev. Philander Chase, late Rector of Christ Church, Hartford, State of Connecticut, preached and performed Divine Service, in the town of Circleville according to the Liturgy of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in the United States of America. After which he explained his reason in coming to the State of Ohio, and the success which had attended his labors, in collecting and organizing churches, to the Glory of God, and the good of men's souls."

In observance of this day, the "Divine Service" will be read at St. Philip's Church at the 10:15 a.m. Family Service as it was used in 1817. The "Divine Service" consisted of Morning Prayer, the Litany, Ante-Communion and Sermon.

A special display of items found in the 1886 cornerstone of the Church is continuing in the Parish Hall of the Church for all who are interested.

NEW TOMORROW

If I had time tonight, I might be a bit frightened. But just now, there's time to feel only excited and happy. It's funny . . . when you're a little kid, it seems as if you go to school forever. Then all of a sudden, it's graduation night, and you know that this is an end and a beginning all at once.

Mom and Dad will be out in the audience, and so will Dan. He sent me these roses. Our minister will be out there too, and I hope he'll notice that the smile I send in his direction will be a particularly grateful one. How often I've gone to him with my childish troubles, only to have him treat them as seriously as if they were of world-shaking consequence. It was he who really taught me how to pray.

He taught me so many of God's lessons. And I am sure that throughout my lifetime I'll be learning them anew and repeating them over and over again. How wonderful to realize that this commencement, this end of an era, is really the beginning of a new tomorrow.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

ADELPHI ISOLATED — Salt Creek swelled over its banks this morning, virtually isolating Adelphi and Laurelvale from Pickaway County. The family that occupied the trailer (above) which was washed across Route 180 was evacuated before the waters pushed it down stream.

REFUGEES — Families from the Bloomdale Addition were evacuated to the High Street School when the flood waters swept through the area. The Pickaway County Chapter of the American Red Cross set up emergency headquarters in the school, providing hot coffee and doughnuts for the families. An estimated 85 families in the city were forced to leave their homes to seek refuge from the waters.

Nairobi Supermarket Has Wares Comparable to U.S.

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A visit to Nairobi's "supermarket" would surprise American housewives who think of Africa in terms of noisy animals, strange languages and dark jungles.

Gourmets priding themselves on exotic dishes from distant lands at high prices would find Nairobi's supermarket has plenty of variety, and often at lower prices than in America.

More than two dozen countries from around the world are represented in the imported foods.

A sign offers "Italian specialties." And on one shelf is a packaged lasagna dinner from Milton, Pa.

The diet-conscious can find five flavors of Metreel, and custard mixes not only from Kenya but also from Montrose, Scotland, and White Plains, N.Y. There are cleansers from Cheshire, Scotland, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Elephant Soap Factory Ltd., Nairobi.

Pushing a cart along the well lighted aisles, one is likely to pass a Norwegian, a U.S. Peace Corps worker, a diplomat from Communist China; road builders from Italy; and housewives from more than two dozen countries.

African women in colorful printed dresses, often with a baby on their backs in a sling, and Asian women in flowing saris mingle with expatriates in walking shorts.

The selective shopper, with plenty of time, can save money.

The East African shilling is worth roughly 14 U.S. cents. A 20 ounce can of grapefruit sections from Tel Aviv goes for 3.5 shillings. The same sized tin of the same item—from Machakos, Kenya—sells for 2.60.

The American housewife finds meat, fruit, and vegetables cheaper than back home but the food bill is about the same due to efforts to maintain the family's normal diet. Rice, noodles and macaroni are more expensive, but potatoes are less than 6 U.S. cents a pound.

Nairobi Supermarket Has Wares Comparable to U.S.

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A visit to Nairobi's "supermarket" would surprise American housewives who think of Africa in terms of noisy animals, strange languages and dark jungles.

Gourmets priding themselves on exotic dishes from distant lands at high prices would find Nairobi's supermarket has plenty of variety, and often at lower prices than in America.

More than two dozen countries from around the world are represented in the imported foods.

A sign offers "Italian specialties." And on one shelf is a packaged lasagna dinner from Milton, Pa.

The diet-conscious can find five flavors of Metreol, and custard mixes not only from Kenya but also from Montrose, Scotland, and White Plains, N.Y. There are cleansers from Cheshire, Scotland, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Elephant Soap Factory Ltd., Nairobi.

Pushing a cart along the well lighted aisles, one is likely to pass a Norwegian, a U.S. Peace Corps worker, a diplomat from Communist China; road builders from Italy; and housewives from more than two dozen countries.

African women in colorful printed dresses, often with a baby on their backs in a sling, and Asian women in flowing saris mingle with expatriates in walking shorts.

The selective shopper, with plenty of time, can save money.

The East African shilling is worth roughly 14 U.S. cents. A 20 ounce can of grapefruit sections from Tel Aviv goes for 3.5 shillings. The same sized tin of the same item—from Machakos, Kenya—sells for 2.60.

The American housewife finds meat, fruit, and vegetables cheaper than back home but the food bill is about the same due to efforts to maintain the family's normal diet. Rice, noodles and macaroni are more expensive, but potatoes are less than 6 U.S. cents a pound.

34 Per Cent Of CHS Grads Choose College

By SUSAN CRITES

Approximately 34 per cent of CHS graduates from the classes of 1964 through 1967 are presently pursuing higher education, according to Richard Fisher, guidance counselor.

The guidance department at CHS recently sent out questionnaires to 644 graduates covering activities since graduation. Of these, 440 have been returned.

The 34 per cent who are attending higher education institutions are enrolled in 20 Ohio colleges and 17 outside the state. Of these students 8 per cent were graduated from High school in the college prep course, along with 11 per cent from the general course. One student graduating from the Home Economics course enrolled in a full-time college.

Those students reporting employment full-time made up 37 per cent of the total responding. Students from the general course made up the largest number of these with 43 per cent, college prep students came next with 24 per cent of the total. The commercial course compiled 37 per cent and Home Economics plus Industrial Arts made up the remaining 3 per cent.

Students serving in the Armed Forces made up 15 per cent of the group and those unemployed and seeking work totaled 5 per cent. The general course led in both of these areas with the college preparatory course providing the second most number in these two groups.

The rest of the students fit into a miscellaneous group made up of housewives and students who are enrolled full-time yet also work part-time.

As for those who were occupied in full-time civilian employment 109 remained in Pickaway County, 42 had jobs elsewhere in Ohio, and five were employed in other states.

The process of the follow-up study was to find out the effectiveness of the course offerings in the high school. It will provide a valuable profile for future curriculum planning and aid the guidance department in the placement of students in courses.

Memorial Day Honors Both War Casualties and Living

By SHARON JOHNSON

Memorial Day, celebrated every May 30, not only honors the dead but has become a day for praying for peace. On public buildings and on all government ships, flags are flown at half mast until noon on Memorial Day.

Every year just preceding Memorial Day, the task of placing a new American flag on the grave of every man and woman who served in the Armed Services of the United States is undertaken by local chapters of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the AMVETS and the Jewish and Catholic Veterans Assn.

The Saturday preceding Memorial Day is Poppy Day in most states and in other countries where there are veterans of the two World Wars. These tiny red artificial poppies with a tag marked "Honor the Dead by Helping the Living" are sold under the sponsorship of Veterans of Foreign Wars for the benefit of disabled veterans.

One picturesque ceremony honoring those who have died in the service of the U.S. Navy is to set tiny ships with flowers afloat upon the waters in all important ports of the United States.

Today, the tradition of placing flowers upon the grave has become a world wide ceremony. This ancient custom has been borrowed from the Druids, the ancient Greeks and the Romans.

South Carolina Governor Raps State Governments

CINCINNATI (AP) — State

governments, smothered in "inefficiency of tradition," respond to needs only after they explode into a crisis, South Carolina Gov. Robert McNair charged here Thursday.

McNair criticized state government for being a "Hodgepodge" of programs and "limping along in this age of space travel very much the same as it did 50 or more years ago."

McNair spoke at the closing session of the two-day "Tri-State Conference of Strengthening the Legislature." Lawmakers from several states, mostly Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, attended.

Citing the growth of the federal government, McNair said public skepticism about increasing the power of local and state government is disturbing.

McNair declared support for a proposed tax sharing plan and said states, especially poorer ones, need to get more funds to strengthen themselves and, in turn, the federal government.

The plan, devised by economist Walter Heller, suggests that the federal government share its income tax revenue with the states, with poorer states getting a larger per capita cut than wealthier ones.

The 44-year-old Democrat also stressed that rural and urban problems both have to be solved because there is no longer a line of demarcation between the two sectors.

"You can't solve the ghetto problem by building taller ghettos," he concluded.

Earlier Thursday, Francis Gallagher, chairman of the Maryland Constitutional Commission, told the conference that the public's general fear and attempts at massive revision can hinder state constitution updating as it has in Maryland.

"We tried to do too much in a single package," Gallagher asserted in reference to the recent voter defeat of a proposed new constitution in his state.

Graduation Brings Close To High School Career

By JACK CARLE

June 2, 1975 seniors will be graduated from CHS. For some, graduation will mean an end, finally, to compulsory education. For most, however, the educational process will continue through trade and technical schools, schooling in the Armed Forces, on-the-job training and college.

Education does not stop after official schooling has ended. Education is an every day process. There has been a final count down here at CHS for the last few days. Exams are now over and there only remains a turn in of books and an awards assembly.

Graduation exercises will be the last meeting of nearly all these seniors who have come through four years as the class of 1968. These past four years have been long and hard, with such subjects as chemistry, algebra, English, history, foreign languages and journalism.

This class has come through four years of football games, basketball contests, and track meets; four years of homecoming dances, sweetheart dances; two years of proms; four years of "The Circle," CHS annual.

This year though has gone quickly. It seems only last week started school, but senior pictures were taken, announcements, caps and gowns and other things only a senior can do were undertaken.

These four years have been too full of memories to be repeated in a short article. I am sure this class, 1968, will have the best memories of four years that a class can have.

Freeman Raps New Drive Against Agriculture Policy

By DON KENDALL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Among the demands of the Agriculture Department made by leaders of the Poor People's Campaign is abolishment of subsidies "to large farmers" for not growing crops.

Attacks upon federal farm programs are not new nor are they confined to political, economic, racial or geographic boundaries. But the suggestion by Poor People's Campaign leaders has touched a sensitive nerve within the department.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman expressed this sensitivity in a speech last week to the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation.

Poverty is the underlying cause of hunger in the United States, Freeman said, not lack of agricultural production.

"Those who would fight poverty by attacking farm programs are misguided," he said. "To end farm programs would create more poverty and more hunger."

Freeman examined briefly

what he said would happen if federal farm programs were scrapped. Those farmers who lacked the financial reserves to weather the storm, he said, would be driven off the land "by the thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, leaving it in monopoly hands."

Freeman doesn't pretend that federal farm programs have halted the exodus of people from the farms. Statistics show otherwise, and Freeman frequently has noted them in his speeches.

Since World War II, he said recently, the population of the United States has grown 55 million, or by 37 per cent. And, he pointed out, in the same period nearly 3 million farms "disappeared as a result of the technological revolution in agriculture."

Rural poverty has rarely been ignored in Freeman's speeches. In many ways, he has explained, the Department of Agriculture is committed to the improvement of rural life.

In calling for a viable, universal effort to conquer poverty as the true solution to hunger problems, Freeman and the leaders of the Poor People's Campaign cannot be far from agreement.

But Freeman is convinced that federal farm programs—despite charges that most subsidies have gone "to large farmers"—have contributed greatly to the orderly development of U.S. agriculture.

Without such development, Freeman says, this nation would not have enough food to distribute to hungry people. As it is, he suggests, the problem here is poverty. Once people are admitted to what Freeman calls "the mainstream of the most vigorous economy" in history, the productivity of agriculture can be extended to everyone.

But in the meantime, Orville Freeman suggests that federal farm programs should not be used as scapegoats, no matter how hungry people become.

Freeman Raps New Drive Against Agriculture Policy

By DON KENDALL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—Among the demands of the Agriculture Department made by leaders of the Poor People's Campaign is abolishment of subsidies "to large farmers" for not growing crops.

Attacks upon federal farm programs are not new nor are they confined to political, economic, racial or geographic boundaries. But the suggestion by Poor People's Campaign leaders has touched a sensitive nerve within the department.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman expressed this sensitivity in a speech last week to the American Freedom from Hunger Foundation.

Poverty is the underlying cause of hunger in the United States, Freeman said, not lack of agricultural production.

"Those who would fight poverty by attacking farm programs are misguided," he said. "To end farm programs would create more poverty and more hunger."

Freeman examined briefly

what he said would happen if federal farm programs were scrapped. Those farmers who lacked the financial reserves to weather the storm, he said, would be driven off the land "by the thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, leaving it in monopoly hands."

Freeman doesn't pretend that federal farm programs have halted the exodus of people from the farms. Statistics show otherwise, and Freeman frequently has noted them in his speeches.

Since World War II, he said recently, the population of the United States has grown 55 million, or by 37 per cent. And, he pointed out, in the same period nearly 3 million farms "disappeared as a result of the technological revolution in agriculture."

Rural poverty has rarely been ignored in Freeman's speeches. In many ways, he has explained, the Department of Agriculture is committed to the improvement of rural life.

In calling for a viable, universal effort to conquer poverty as the true solution to hunger problems, Freeman and the leaders of the Poor People's Campaign cannot be far from agreement.

But Freeman is convinced that federal farm programs—despite charges that most subsidies have gone "to large farmers"—have contributed greatly to the orderly development of U.S. agriculture.

Without such development, Freeman says, this nation would not have enough food to distribute to hungry people. As it is, he suggests, the problem here is poverty. Once people are admitted to what Freeman calls "the mainstream of the most vigorous economy" in history, the productivity of agriculture can be extended to everyone.

But in the meantime, Orville Freeman suggests that federal farm programs should not be used as scapegoats, no matter how hungry people become.

Ebenhack Opens Busy Year Tonight at Scioto Downs

MISS RED LION — Emmitt Ebenhack will be racing with the seasoned campaigner, Miss Red Lion, at Scioto Downs Saturday in the $3,500 Invitational Pace. He is giving the pacing mare a final workout at the Van Camp track before moving her to the Franklin County five-eighth mile oval.

Emmitt Ebenhack, well known area harness horse breeder, trainer, driver, open the Scioto Downs Season tonight with two entries, and comes right back Saturday with two more.

One of the busier trainers in the business, Ebenhack has been racing at Northfield, where he finished in the money eight times in 10 starts.

He reined Tonia's Son to a pair of wins at Northfield, pacing the pile on 2:06 1-5 in one race and in 2:11 in the mud in another race.

Miss Red Lion, who Ebenhack campaigned so successfully last year, was third in a race with a time of 2:04 2-5.

ASSISTING Ebenhack with his stable this year are his son, Tom, who will graduate from Circleville High School this year, and Melvin Fox.

Tom, 17, has a license to drive at county fairs and matinees. He owns Hi Vo, a three year old pacer by Abbe Vo, Ebenhack's 17-year-old stallion.

More Horses Are Drugged, Reports Show

BOSTON (AP) — The medication, fit for a human but not for a horse, is manufactured elsewhere, but Massachusetts is becoming known as the home of the bute.

The casual race fan knew little about phenylbutazone, a pain-relieving medication, until Dancer's Image, owned by Boston sportsman Peter Fuller, was disqualified in the Kentucky Derby.

The trade name of butazolidin helped the fan little. All he knew was that the first New England-owned winner of the Derby had been disqualified and placed last.

Reports, which filtered in later, said that such outstanding athletes as Sandy Koufax and Whitey Ford took bute to prolong their baseball careers.

Dancer's Image finished first in the Kentucky Derby, but was disqualified after traces of the medication were found in a routine urinalysis.

Now bute is plaguing the sports at Massachusetts tracks. Traces of the medication were reported found in winners of three races at two tracks last Saturday.

Stewards at Berkshire Downs in western Massachusetts suspended two trainers whose horses won last Saturday.

Berkshire Downs, in Hancock, reported "a drug of the nature of butazolidin" was found in Nashua Breeze and We Salute. Trainer Fred Elliott of Lakeville, Mass., was suspended Friday as a result of the finding after Nashua Breeze's triumph.

Make America Better

The beginning of success lies in men's hearts. The Greek poet Alcaeus put the emphasis where it belonged when he wrote, nearly 3,000 years ago:

Not by her houses neat,
Nor by her well-built walls,
Nor yet again
Neither by dock nor street,
A city stands and falls
But by her men.
Not by the joiner's skill,
Nor work in wood or stone,
Comes good to her or ill,
But by her men alone.

Shares Lead, But Unhappy

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The fans who saw B. R. McLendon sink a 20-foot eagle putt to share the first-round lead in the $100,000 Memphis Open Golf Tournament figured he was happy as a lark. But his wife, Joan, knew better.

"He didn't say anything to me, but when I saw him go to the practice tee after coming off the 18th, I knew he wasn't happy with his woods and long irons," the pretty blonde said.

McLendon, 22, who won the 1965-66-67 Southeastern Conference golf titles, came into the Memphis Open Thursday virtually unknown to the gallery.

Jim Lunn, 23, of Sacramento, Calif., shared the first-round lead with McLendon as both came in with five-under-par 65s Thursday. Lunn finished the round three hours ahead of McLendon, a late starter.

McLendon's wife is touring with him, but she didn't see his 67.

"I figure this is a day of work," he said. "A doctor

Ebenhack Opens Busy Year Tonight at Scioto Downs

MISS RED LION — Emmitt Ebenhack will be racing with the seasoned campaigner, Miss Red Lion, at Scioto Downs Saturday in the $3,500 Invitational Pace. He is giving the pacing mare a final workout at the Van Camp track before moving her to the Franklin County five-eighth mile oval.

Emmitt Ebenhack, well known area harness horse breeder, trainer, driver, open the Scioto Downs Season tonight with two entries, and comes right back Saturday with two more.

One of the busier trainers in the business, Ebenhack has been racing at Northfield, where he finished in the money eight times in 10 starts.

He reined Tonia's Son to a pair of wins at Northfield, pacing the pile on 2:06 1-5 in one race and in 2:11 in the mud in another race.

Miss Red Lion, who Ebenhack campaigned so successfully last year, was third in a race with a time of 2:04 2-5.

ASSISTING Ebenhack with his stable this year are his son, Tom, who will graduate from Circleville High School this year, and Melvin Fox.

Tom, 17, has a license to drive at county fairs and matinees. He owns Hi Vo, a three year old pacer by Abbe Vo, Ebenhack's 17-year-old stallion.

More Horses Are Drugged, Reports Show

BOSTON (AP) — The medication, fit for a human but not for a horse, is manufactured elsewhere, but Massachusetts is becoming known as the home of the bute.

The casual race fan knew little about phenylbutazone, a pain-relieving medication, until Dancer's Image, owned by Boston sportsman Peter Fuller, was disqualified in the Kentucky Derby.

The trade name of butazolidin helped the fan little. All he knew was that the first New England-owned winner of the Derby had been disqualified and placed last.

Reports, which filtered in later, said that such outstanding athletes as Sandy Koufax and Whitey Ford took bute to prolong their baseball careers.

Dancer's Image finished first in the Kentucky Derby, but was disqualified after traces of the medication were found in a routine urinalysis.

Now bute is plaguing the sports at Massachusetts tracks. Traces of the medication were reported found in winners of three races at two tracks last Saturday.

Stewards at Berkshire Downs in western Massachusetts suspended two trainers whose horses won last Saturday.

Berkshire Downs, in Hancock, reported "a drug of the nature of butazolidin" was found in Nashua Breeze and We Salute. Trainer Fred Elliott of Lakeville, Mass., was suspended Friday as a result of the finding after Nashua Breeze's triumph.

Make America Better

The beginning of success lies in men's hearts. The Greek poet Alcaeus put the emphasis where it belonged when he wrote, nearly 3,000 years ago:

Not by her houses neat,
Nor by her well-built walls,
Nor yet again
Neither by dock nor street,
A city stands and falls
But by her men.
Not by the joiner's skill,
Nor work in wood or stone,
Comes good to her or ill,
But by her men alone.

Reds Open 3-Game Series Against Pittsburgh Tonight

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds, who top the majors in team hitting with a .255 average, open a three-game series here tonight against cellar-dwelling Pittsburgh.

Occupying fifth place in the scrambling National League race, the Reds are out to snap a two-game losing streak, score some runs and maintain their leading batting average.

Cincinnati lost to Houston 3-2 Tuesday and 1-0 Wednesday and managed a scant two safeties in the shutout. The Reds had the day off Thursday.

In their last outing with the Pirates, the Reds swept a three-game set. But that was while the Pirates were bothered by a surprising weak hitting attack.

The Pirates recently have lost four contests without scoring a run and dropped four more by 2-1 scores. They snapped a five-game losing skid Wednesday by drubbing Chicago 13-6 behind Willie Stargel's three homers.

The Pirates, preseason picks by many to win the pennant, have not lived up to their billing, although they are only five games off the pace set by San Francisco.

Bob Veale will oppose Cincinnati's George Culver tonight.

Letters To The Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE — We welcome letters to the editor. In order to be considered for publication, they must bear the correct name and address of the writer. Anonymous letters and those signed with the request that signatures be withheld will not be accepted for publication. Opinions expressed in this column are those of the writers and not necessarily those of The Herald.

Dear Editor:

The efforts of our fighting men in Vietnam today and the resulting losses and casualties focuses the attention of all patriotic Americans upon the annual observance of Poppy Day this year. Mrs. Vernon H. Randall, National President of the American Legion Auxiliary stated.

"Americans have always given generous support to the Poppy Day program conducted by the American Legion Auxiliary and this year's observance provides all of us with a timely opportunity for reaffirming our heartfelt appreciation for the sacrifices made by our armed forces in the defense of America's freedoms," the National President explained.

"Through wearing the little red Poppy, thoughtful Americans in all sections of the United States are enabled to offer simple and sincere appreciation to our gallant fighting men who have made the supreme sacrifice," Mrs. Randall added. In addition, the contributions made by generous Americans on Poppy Day are utilized to aid the victims of war still in hospitals and to provide assistance to the children and widows of our country's war dead.

The traditional day of remembrance for all the nation's war dead will be observed in Circleville, Saturday, May 25. Plans have been completed for Poppy Day here with a number of American Legion Auxiliary members and SOS Club girls from the Jr. Hi. and Sophomore classes joining together to distribute the Poppies throughout the city.

"Our Unit invites all citizens of Circleville community to join with us Saturday by supporting Poppy Day, our time of remembrance."

Dear Editor:

Having not seen a copy of the Herald since spring break, I don't know what you said about our recent "riot", but I do know how other papers and news media handled it. I, and many other students, consider this coverage to have been only half-measured.

Sure, we were all upset about not going home when our administration assured us that we would, and that now we can't study because of the let-down, but these weren't the only reasons. At a meeting Tuesday night of our student government president and the student body we drew up a list of proposals that we thought to be totally rational and fair, and which might help to explain why we did what we did. With your permission I will list some of the more important requests and let parents of Ohio

University students know why.

(1.) Student control of our student center, which, supposedly, exists for our recreation, but in which we have very little control.

(2.) Student control of the spending of our student fees, now being used in athletics and building sports palaces.

(3.) A voice for students in the allocation of funds for new buildings. We need class buildings to replace antiquated facilities, not more Beasley Sports Centers.

(4.) Smaller classes in order to foster better student-faculty understanding. Many classes now number more than 250, our freshman Psych 1 class had 2,000 students in it.

(5.) More power for professors in determining class work loads, classes offered, administering of classes, and in teaching promotions.

(6.) The bettering of dormitory conditions to provide better food and to return room occupancy to the number of students the rooms were designed for.

(7.) We propose a lengthening of student women's hours. How can a school justly dictate to women of nineteen and twenty to be in at eleven o'clock?

(8.) There is a need for the end of student fee increases. Ohio University is now in the top five highest priced schools for in-state schools in the nation, with more increases on the way.

(9.) A university owned and non-profit bookstore. Students spend $5 million each year in Athens for necessities such as books and clothes, at totally unrealistic prices.

(10.) President Alden to meet with all students at least once a month to explain current issues.

(11.) Stopping the administration from undermining our student government, powerless as it is, at every occasion.

To an outsider this may seem to be quite a lot, but other universities have these things. Why can't we? True, if we don't like it we could get out, but most of us like our school, despite its shortcomings, and we want it to be a true institution of higher learning — where we can exist as peaceful citizens, not just as dollar signs.

The Mayor's Report

Complaints and Information

By MAYOR RICHARD L. GERHARDT

Everyday, many residents call one of the City Departments or myself seeking information or to register a complaint. We have and always shall encourage all of you to call us.

One of the most frustrating things any citizen can encounter is government red tape. We hope that we do not have that problem in Circleville. Your Mayor is concerned that each and every request is efficiently and speedily taken care of. Do not hesitate to call for fear you might be calling the wrong department. Whichever office you call will gladly take your request and if another department takes care of such a request, the office you called will forward it to them.

We are here to serve you, the citizens of Circleville, what is asked cannot always be done, but we will do everything that we are capable of doing. If you do not know which department to call, then we are asking you to call me or the City Receptionist at the Service Department (474-2965) and she will handle your complaint or get you the information you want. If you would rather write to us about your complaint, just address your letter to "Complaints" Office of the Mayor, City Hall, Circleville, Ohio.

In anticipation of some complaints and in response to some already made, we are in the process of trying to better facilitate traffic in the downtown and outlying areas. Mid-block crosswalks on east and west Main Street will soon be in operation. This will enable both adults and children to cross safely without having to make the long walk to the intersections. All the alleys in the downtown area are now 1-way leading away from Main Street and no left hand turns will be erected at the alleys next to the new crosswalks. A four way stop has been placed at the corner of Watt and Washington to eliminate dangerous situations.

In the near future, new traffic lanes will be established on U.S. Route 22 East at the Kroger shopping area. This will serve to relieve the congestion in this area and to control the increased flow to be expected when Buckeye Mart opens.

Ambulance Hits Auto; Two Injured

Two persons suffered injuries resulting from a collision on Nicholas Dr. early Friday.

Treated and released by Berger Hospital were Pheris Kreiger, 42, of 380 Cedar Heights Road., who injured his left hand and left shoulder and Charles Wellman, 35, of 826 N. Court St., who suffered a broken left hand.

Kreiger stated he was headed South on Nicholas Dr. and was preparing to turn onto Clark Dr. when he heard the siren of the Defenbaugh ambulance, driven by Wellman. Kreiger's auto was then struck by the ambulance.

The accident is still under investigation.

Attempted B & E Unsuccessful

Circleville Police were notified of an attempted breaking and entering at Cupp Marathon Station, 202 N. Court St.

Lawrence Cupp, 155 W. High St., told police the east door of the building was pried by someone during the night. The entry attempt was not successful.

Men Escape Plane Crash In Park

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two men walked away from the crash of a light plane that narrowly missed a group of boys playing baseball and burst into flames after sliding through a tennis court in suburban Fairview Park Thursday.

Jack Marshall, 42, the pilot, said the engine on the single-engine Piper Cherokee stalled shortly after takeoff from Cleveland Hopkins Airport, less than two miles from the crash scene.

Marshall, of Birmingham, Ala. and his passenger, David Anderson, 30, of Port Clinton, Ohio, suffered minor injuries.

The pilot said he purposely skimmed trees in Morton Park to slow the plane before it hit the ground. The aircraft hit a tree at the edge of the baseball field veered down and hit a short fence, rupturing the gas tank.

Fairview Park Fire Chief J. Orrie Baumgartner said the net and fence of the tennis court saved "a real disaster." A 26-building apartment complex is less than 75 feet from where the plane was stopped by the wire fence.
